BEER NOT PUBLIC DANGER

Edinburgh, June 13. The Court today dismissed minor William Gibson's £100 damages claim for a broken ankle after riding that beer spilled on a towel floor was not a public danger. United Press.

Pacific Radio Phone

By next month, when it is hoped that certain technical problems will have been solved, it will be possible to pick up a telephone at home or in the office and make a call 7,000 miles across the Pacific to any point in the United States.

Later, it will be just as convenient to contact a number in Britain from Hong Kong.

Preparations for the opening of a Trans-Pacific Radio-Telephone service have already been completed in the Colony, the only problem awaiting solution being a technical one at Manila through which city Hong Kong messages will be relayed to America.

Businessmen, the Sunday Herald was authoritatively informed yesterday, may rest assured that their conversations across the Pacific, even if intercepted by unauthorized persons, will prove of no value to the latter. "Scrambling" devices will be used to "chop" up words into meaningless sounds making conversations unintelligible to any one who "listens in."

Rates for calls to the Philippines and the United States have not yet been fixed.

The projected radio-telephone service to London will be relayed through Colombo. There are also plans for similar services to Macao, Canton, Nanking, and Shanghai.

Tokyo, June 14. The sale of advertising space on postage stamps is being considered as a means of raising revenue for the Communications Ministry, the Kyodo News Agency reported today. It said the new minister, Takao Miki, is also considering adverts on telephone poles. Associated Press.

Tramp Shakes Up The Workhouse

Hythe, June 14. Alfred van Leeuwen, a veteran English tramp worthy of an O. Henry short story, today caused a shake-up in the Workhouse—but it cost him two months in jail.

Van Leeuwen, whose ragged clothes belie his legal knowledge, opened his attack on the law by heaving bricks through the windows of a workhouse which refused to heed him until next morning.

He then wrote a highly legal note to the King's Bench declaring that a 16-year-old order from the Health Ministry required the institution to provide him with bread, margarine and tea. "If this workhouse master had been doing his duty this offence would not have occurred but I must inform the court that this master is not carrying out the order of the Ministry and I was in duty-bound to take the law into my own hands," he wrote. Edwin F. Webb, County Public Assistance officer, admitted defendant had "exposed a weakness which called for an investigation."

London, June 13. A warning against the re-emergence of Japanese cut price competition in the world textile markets was made by Mr. Wentworth Schofield of Oldham, when the annual meeting of the Association of the British Chambers of Commerce resumed in London today.

"We agree that Japan should play her part in alleviating the shortage of cotton goods throughout the world, but cheap labour and the low standards of the Orient are far more likely to cause unemployment and depression in Britain through putting textiles on the world markets at lower cost than British goods," he said.

Mr. W. L. Jones of Manchester said that cheap foreign goods had caused the depression in the cotton trade of Lancashire before the war, and it would be a tremendous calamity if that occurred.

Colonel C. J. Hirst of Glasgow said that the commercial morality of Japan was of a very low order and the Japanese Government before the war took no steps to deal with intentional imitations and other frauds.

A Black Day

False lengths, weights and wrong trade marks were almost universal and had the consequence of the Japanese Government.

"I hesitate to think what will happen when the Allied Control Council is taken away. If they are free to start their infamous practices again, it will be a black day for British trade." A resolution, that the development of industry in export countries should be balanced by the Allied Control Commission so that when countries recovered their independence their economy would not impair employment in the other parts of the world, was passed. —Reuter.

"The Old Clique"

Lake Success, June 14. Russia charged that the American-controlled Japanese Government is "closing its eyes to fascist activities" and that the "old Japanese military clique" is in power.

The charge was made by Soviet delegate Vladimir Koretsky at a session of the Drafting Committee on the United Nations Commission on Human Rights.

Koretsky said the Soviet press was particularly interested in how Democracy was working in Japan because the Japanese constitution as at present drafted, is along the lines of the American constitution.

He said, "the old Japanese military clique" was arresting political leaders and demonstrators. He said this group represents "wolves in sheep's clothing." —Associated Press.

"STOP THE JAPANESE"

Shanghai, June 14. In an editorial "Stop the Japanese" John Powell in the "China Weekly Review" said today that Japan must pay reparations according to the Potsdam agreement; even if Japan's people starve.

He said: "They'll not starve if the country is thoroughly demilitarised and democratised."

He added: "A civil government exercising common sense is needed in Japan... it is high time to get rid of Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his small coterie composed mainly of mediocre old friends dating back to the Philippine Army post-days."

Powell said Japan's aspirations for a foothold in the Ryukyus and special immigration rights in Formosa "are straws in the wind," showing the plan to restore Japan to "its former position of strength," a level which allowed Japan to follow an aggressive policy and engulf one defenceless country after another.

"SCAP, whether on its own initiative or otherwise, has launched a programme of reconstructing Japan's industrial potential to the menace and detriment of the other Pacific countries." —Associated Press.

Flood Damage At Bradford

While people in the South of England were basking in the sun and almost revelling in a temperature of 85 deg., it was 30 deg. cooler in the North. Heavy thunderstorms caused flood damage in Bradford, York, as can be seen from this photo taken on Saturday, May 31. (Associated Press Photo).

Big Rubber Dump Blaze

At the height of England's recent heat-wave, fire broke out in a big Government rubber dump at Carshalton Road, Mitcham Junction, Surrey, on June 2nd, causing the most spectacular night of smoke over London since the "Blitz." More than 30 fire engines were rushed from all parts of South London to fight the fire, which spread rapidly. This aerial photo was taken shortly after the fire started. (Associated Press photo).

Fiend Poisons 17 Women

Paris, June 13. The Mayor of Macon today asked the French National Surete to search for a "fiend" suspected of poisoning 17 women after operations in the gynaecological section of the Macon Hospital.

All the women, according to hospital records, showed the same symptoms—the day after the operation, they lapsed into a coma, then their reflexes ceased, their pulse slackened and they died. The last death was on March 25 and the first was over three years ago.

Hospital doctors said they assumed at first that the deaths were due to operative complications, but they became suspicious when each victim showed the same symptoms. The operations were performed by four different surgeons.

The Surete said only that it was working on the case after the Macon Mayor asked for a warrant "for the arrest of a person or persons unknown" because of the deaths in the hospital under suspicious circumstances.

However, Professor Claude Griffon, director of the Toxicological Laboratory in Paris, who examined the last victim, said: "There is reason to believe all these poor women were poisoned. I cannot imagine why anyone would have wanted to do it and we must work very cautiously." —United Press.

POISON LETTER WRITER

Gignod, June 13. This entire little village high in the Italian Alps near the great St. Bernard Pass took a day off today to celebrate.

After a year of investigation the police last night arrested 30-year-old Ignazio Arizzi and charged him with being the author of more than 600 anonymous letters informing Gignod husbands and wives of matters better left unsaid.

Arizzi fully admitted operating his private domestic detective agency on a free of charge basis and said he did it out of revenge because his sweetheart jilted him when someone circulated gossip about him. —United Press.

50 Die In Air Crash

Leesburg, Va., June 14. The Pennsylvania Airlines announced today that the wreckage of the DC-4 "Skymaster" which disappeared last night while en route from Pittsburgh to Washington with 47 passengers and a crew of three, has been located atop the Blue Ridge Mountains in Northwest Virginia.

An official of the Pennsylvania Central Airlines said the 50 persons aboard must have perished.

James Franklin, PCA maintenance director who located the wreckage from the air, said there is no hope for the lives of anyone. The big aircraft was completely wrecked and there was no sign of life.

Franklin said: "Since I was flying below the top of the ridge and sighted the wreckage above me, the aircraft must have flown directly into the top of the mountain in the line of flight. She was directly on her course and was in the normal flight position but flew too low."

The plane was last seen as it flew low over Blue Mount, Va., about 6.30 p.m. EST. Eyewitnesses said it appeared to be in trouble. Its engines were sputtering and it seemed to be having difficulty in maintaining altitude. It was flying on a direct line for Leesburg.

Every town in the Virginia and West Virginia area quickly organised searching parties and this morning more than 1,000 men hunted for the plane. They were hampered badly by heavy fog and roads mud-bogged by torrential rains.

This is the third plane of the airline to meet trouble in the Blue Ridge Mountain area. In 1940, an airliner crashed near Lovettsville, killing 23, and in 1945 a DC-3 fell in flames near Morgantown, Va., with a death toll of 24.

Officials of the airline said that when the plane passed over Martinsburg, W. Va., last evening the pilot reported everything normal and enough to keep him aloft until 12.30 a.m. EDT. That was the last heard from him. —United Press.

Another Revolt In Sinkiang Looms

Nanking, June 14. Loss of effective Chinese control of a large part of Northern Sinkiang is held possible today as official sources made available to the press fuller information on the Outer Mongolian invasion of the northwest border province. The Outer Mongolian attacks, ostensibly intended as reprisal against the Chinese capture of eight Outer Mongolian soldiers, are showing signs of developing into a serious border dispute requiring complicated diplomatic wrangles between China and the Soviet-sponsored Mongolian People's Republic.

The border has not yet been defined and if the Outer Mongolians decide to stay where they are the Chinese Government will be placed in a precarious position. Resort to force to oust them would lead to serious consequences.

According to the latest information, the Outer Mongolian invasion has been given impetus by anti-Chinese forces in Northern Sinkiang where a second "Ling revolt against Chinese authority seem in the offing. Conflicts between pro-Soviet and pro-Chinese factions have been going on since February, ending in the ousting of pro-Chinese Commissioner Usman from the northern portion of Anshan area.

The Outer Mongolian invasion seems to have the dual purpose of driving out Usman (thus wreathing the Anshan area which is reported to be rich in uranium deposits) and of pushing the Mongolian boundary further into Chinese territory—if official reports here are correct.

According to a Chinese source, as the situation at present stands, China has already lost effective control of Lili and a large part of the Anshan area. Lili is ruled by pro-Soviet and Soviet-trained Lilihan. His leading supporter is Ahomanchang, Vice-Governor of Sinkiang. The latter, pro-Soviet and trained in Moscow, had steadfastly refused to permit Nanking-appointed Governor Musall assume his post.

Chinese And War Memorial Fund

In accordance with the decision arrived at the meeting of 32 local Chinese bodies on June 10 at the local Kuomintang Office, Director Li Tachao, of the Kuomintang Office, Hong Kong & Macao District, yesterday made the following appeal:

"At the outbreak of the Pacific War, when the Colony was attacked by the Japanese, many Chinese, under the leadership of Admiral Chen Chao, then Director of the Kuomintang Office in Hong Kong, gave indispensable assistance to the British Forces here in the resistance against enemy offensives. Through this loyalty at last fell, the invaders suffered no small damage at the hands of the gallant defenders, who, wounded or dead, dedicated their full measure of devotion to the cause of liberty and safety for the Hong Kong inhabitants."

"With the liberation there was suggested the establishing of a fund, in some form or other, for the support of disabled veterans and helpless widows and orphans of the war dead by instituting hospitals and orphanages. Director Li finally expressed his earnest desire that the local Chinese will give whatever they can to the War Memorial Fund as a sure means for remembering the gallant deeds of our heroes."

Correction To Reuter Report

In connection with a report from Lahore which appeared in the local Press on Thursday, June 12, that Mr. L.J. McTavish, Principal Officer of the Hong Kong Prison, is in India with the object of getting back to this Colony, the Punjab personnel of the Hong Kong Police and Prisons staff, the Commissioner of Police wishes to point out that this report is incorrect in so far as it refers to the Police. Mr. McTavish is acting only on behalf of the Prisons Department and not on behalf of the Police.

Indian Trade Delegation In Hong Kong

Carrying 300 lb. of raw cotton samples, a seven-man Indian Trade Delegation to Japan, headed by India's biggest cotton exporter, T. Kilaschand, will leave for Tokyo via Shanghai on Tuesday morning by air. They are to negotiate with SCAP and Japanese piecegoods manufacturers for the re-establishment of commerce between Japan and India, either on a government-to-government basis or between private firms.

Five members of the Delegation—Messrs. T. Kilaschand, G.P. Barot, Huttie Singh, J.P. Patel, and Abu Fatch Ali—arrived here on Friday. The other two are expected to arrive tomorrow.

During the stopover here, Mr. Kilaschand is a guest of H.E. the Officer Administering the Government, Mr. D.M. Macdonough. Tomorrow at 6.30 p.m., the Mission will be entertained by the local Indian community in the Roof Garden, Hong Kong Hotel.

In an interview yesterday, Mr. Kilaschand told the "Sunday Herald" that India hopes to supply 400,000 bales of Japan's requirements of raw cotton in 1947.

India, he added, was in a position to supply whatever amount Japan needed, pointing out that before the war India supplied Japan with 50 per cent of the latter's raw cotton imports.

As far as China was concerned, Mr. Kilaschand saw no immediate prospects of her importing Indian raw cotton in view of the existing import regulations which were introduced shortly after the Indian Trade Mission to China had successfully concluded discussions on the subject and left for home.

Shipping

Among other things which the Delegation will discuss with SCAP in Tokyo will be shipping. Mr. Kilaschand disclosed. He said that since 90 per cent of the freight between India and Japan was carried by Japanese ships before the war, India naturally wants to have the shipping business between the two countries in Indian hands.

Three members of the Delegation are cotton experts, two are connected with light and heavy industry, and one is a silk expert. While in Japan, the Delegation will inspect industrial equipment in connection with reparations which, however, will be officially handled by an Indian Technical Mission due to leave India for Japan in August.

The Delegation will also inquire into Japan's silk and rayon production with a view to negotiating for eventual exports of Japanese silk and rayon products to India.

COUGH TO RESCUE

Farnham Royal, Bucks.

June 14.

A baby's coughing saved five people's lives early today when Allard's Guest House at Farnham Royal—opened last week after conversion from a farm house to a private hotel—was severely damaged by fire.

The baby's coughing woke up the parents, who found the room full of smoke.—Reuter.

Money Market

Continued strong demand sent gold up to $203 a tael yesterday, after opening at $200.25. It had eased off to $200 for a time but quickly rallied. At the close it was $202.

Plasters opened at $11.20 a 100 and climbed to $11.55, closing a little easier at $11.50.

Chinese National Currency futures was unchanged at 12 1/2 cents, but spot was easier and down to 17 1/2 cents at the close (for CN$1,000).

Sterling declined further to $13.45, U.S. dollars and Australian pounds were unchanged at $4.01 and $12.52 respectively.

Palmer Sentenced

not have been amongst his pressing creditors.

"We understand from the evidence that CWT had many pressing creditors. Would it not have been a natural thing to satisfy the most pressing of these and enter up the transaction in the books in the proper way? The accused stated that he financed the payroll to the money from time to time. No particular instance of that, properly connected up with book entries, was brought to the Court's notice. But how does that tally with his fear of Fletcher and his potential demand for the return of some of the money?"

"When we have the point of keeping this money on his person amongst his private property and not in a Bank or the office safe. The accused's explanation of that was that his premises were unsafe in that the keys were available to anyone at the Peninsula Hotel cash desk. All I can say to that is that he was Marine Superintendent responsible for so arranging things that his office premises are secure, and for those of us who find that that is impossible, banking facilities are available to us, also, as it happens, in the Peninsula Hotel Building."

"And that brings us down to March 8 when Goodwin's visits to Palmer commenced. I have already recounted Palmer's extraordinary behaviour at these interviews: firstly, his denial that any goods (other than a few small items) had been sold; his denial that the lathe had been sold; his subsequent allegation that the lathe had been loaned and returned when there never was any question of the lathe being loaned; his denial of receipt of any payment for the lathe, and his final confession that $3,000 worth of goods were sold (the figure which Ng had originally mentioned as being the amount by which he was short of cash in his accounts, the only figure of any kind which had been entered in the books of account) and to justify this the production of a list of goods which bore no relation whatever to the list which he himself had seen of the goods which had been shipped and could not possibly, if valued, have come to $10,000, but might easily have come to $3,000."

"The list which he handed Goodwin was, he alleged, the list of goods which MELCO had accepted, which to his knowledge was a false list, knowing as he did that the value of the goods accepted by MELCO on Feb. 18 was $10,614.45."

Conscious Of Wrong

"The accused admitted the accuracy of Goodwin's evidence and his defence to it was the plea that he deliberately intended to give Goodwin the impression that only $3,000 of goods had been sold because he knew he could get the goods back from Macao; that he was very conscious then of his having done wrong in disposing of CNRA goods without authority and wanted to minimise the seriousness of his offence in the eyes of his employers."

"Does that ring true in the light of what we have seen, and heard? The accused says he felt like a naughty boy wishing to make amends. In the witness box, at one point, I noticed a very different feeling in the mind of the accused. When pressed in cross-examination for his reasons for giving false answers to Goodwin he said with some vigour 'UNRA had done nothing for me. My feelings included resentment to UNRA as personified in Mr. Goodwin.'"

"We may look at his record as disclosed by himself, his age and the evidence of character given by Mr. Jones, and his demeanour in Court to help us decide if this explanation is to be believed. His brilliant Naval record in the late war when he commanded troops in battle and endured dangers indicated a man who was not afraid of responsibility or of making decisions, and as Mr. Jones put it, a man who was exceedingly efficient in his duties in a way that got things done, without necessarily conforming to all formalities."

Not A Shirk

"Such an action would seem to have been more in accord with such a forceful confident personality as Palmer. Whatever else he is one would not expect him normally to be a shirker of his responsibilities. Would a man of this type suddenly change his colour on being admonished by an UNRA investigator if there was nothing more behind it than selling some surplus goods without authority? Would he have hedged and dodged during his three interviews with Goodwin as he did? Would his resentment (and the defence case leaves no room for doubt that he had ample cause for resentment) to UNRA (Shanghai) not have come out, at any rate, at his third interview with Goodwin, where one would have thought he might have told Goodwin exactly what he thought of UNRA and given him full details of a transaction which, in his judgment, was in the interests of UNRA, whether it was technically (in his judgment) a breach of duty or not? Is this, or the cringing schoolboy attitude, the most likely?"

"These are all questions I have asked myself. I have done this in the light of the evidence relating to the initial transaction, the charges, receipts, and absence of book entries are concerned. And I am reluctantly compelled (on all the evidence in this case I have so far considered) to say I am satisfied beyond all doubt that the accused fraudulently intended to, and did, convert the two sums totalling $7,014.45 to his own use."

"Regarding the purchase of the car and the accused's remarks to Davidson I must say I have shut my eyes to that in coming to this decision. The mere purchase of a car nearly two months after the receipt of the sum alleged to have been converted means very little. The Crown referred to the Goddard case in England. I have not the facts of that case before me, but my recollection is that the Crown then adduced ample evidence to show that Goddard, a Scotland Yard Inspector, was living in a way far beyond his legitimate financial means."

"Davidson's demeanour in the witness box did not impress the Court favourably, but the accused admits a good deal of Davidson's evidence, and the evidence generally here in corroborative of the accused's guilty state of mind, a conclusion I have reached independently of the other evidence in this case."

"In conclusion, I might add it appears from the evidence that the accused is still in possession of $914.40 on CNRA money. As I have already indicated, I find the accused guilty of the two fraudulent conversion charges and he is accordingly convicted of both."

Armed Robbers Convicted

The armed robbery and kidnapping case which has engaged the attention of Mr. Justice Gould and jury for several days was concluded yesterday morning when seven of the nine men were convicted.

The accused were charged with armed robbery on March 11 at 35 South Wall Street and with the kidnapping of Chau Cheung-yin, a folk.

Tsang Wai-keung, who was also found guilty of forcibly detaining Chau with intent to secure ransom was sentenced to 12 years and 10 strokes.

Yau Kwai, who was recommended for leniency was given one year.

Another accused Yuen Koon-shun was remanded as the jury could not reach a decision.

The other accused, Hui-yung, Chu Yan, Yuen Chee-ming, Lau Pui and Lai Chai were all sentenced to 10 years and 10 strokes. Yeung Chi-cheung was found not guilty and discharged.

Chu Wing, travelling trader, and Hui Kwai-chik, dentist, who were charged with obtaining the sums of $2,000 and $3,000 respectively from Lau Ming on May 30 and June 4, were remanded for three days when they appeared before Mr. F.X. d'Almeida yesterday.

ULSTER "DICTATORSHIP"

Undemocratic Northern Ireland

Commons Attack On Irish Tories

London, June 13.
An attack on the Northern Ireland Government for alleged undemocratic practices was made in the House of Commons at Westminster to-day during the second reading, which was given without division, of the Northern Ireland Bill.

The bill extends the powers of the Ulster Government to deal with schemes of social services, highways, bridges and inland waterways, many of which are linked with Eire.

About 200 Labour Members and a few Liberals had put down in amendment, declining to give the second reading, but eventually did not move it.

They considered the bill itself mainly harmless and their chief purpose was to draw attention to the "Ulster Tories"—Tory stalwarts exercising dictatorial measures right on our own doorstep.

The chief target of criticism was the special powers taken by the Northern Ireland Government to deal with the Irish Republican Army. Mr. George Bing (Labour Member for Hornchurch) said there was something undemocratic about a Government which possessed such powers.

Democracy A Farce
Imprisonment without trial or exile without hearing awaited opponents of the Northern Ireland Government. Religious sectarianism was everywhere and was encouraged even by members of the Cabinet.

The Ulster Government, Mr. Bing said, pursued a policy of giving plural business votes and taking away votes from the ordinary man in the street. Returned soldiers were due for disfranchisement because they could not find a separately rated building in which to live. In such conditions democracy became a farce.

Anthony Mulvey, Irish Nationalist and one of the 13 Northern Ireland Members of Parliament at Westminster, said the position in Ulster was the most undemocratic in the British Empire. He contended that out of all Europe only in Northern Ireland was there a religious bar to public employment.

Sir Hugh O'Neill, Ulster Unionist Member for County Antrim, "utterly, completely, absolutely and categorically" denied the charge of persecution of the Roman Catholic minority. He suggested, however, that the Special Powers Act, which admittedly infringed the liberty of the subject, should be reviewed annually.

Test Of Sincerity
Winding up the debate, the Home Secretary, Mr. Chuter Ede, speaking, he said, as a private Member, considered Sir Hugh's suggestion of automatic review wise. It would, he said, relieve the House of some of its anxieties.

One point raised by Mr. Bing which might possibly justify withholding consent to the bill was the fear expressed that certain civil servants in the employ of the United Kingdom Government might suffer disabilities for their religious and political views.

PHONE WAR OF NERVES

London, June 13.
The telephone "war of nerves," in which officials are notified that a bomb has been placed in a public building, was resumed to-day.

After a lapse of several months in the campaign, an unidentified person warned Scotland Yard that a bomb was about to go off at the Passport Office. Nothing was found in a search of the building.—United Press.

Philippine Bullion

Manila, June 14.
Philippine gold bullion is now finding its way to the world market for the first time, according to the Manila Bulletin to-day.

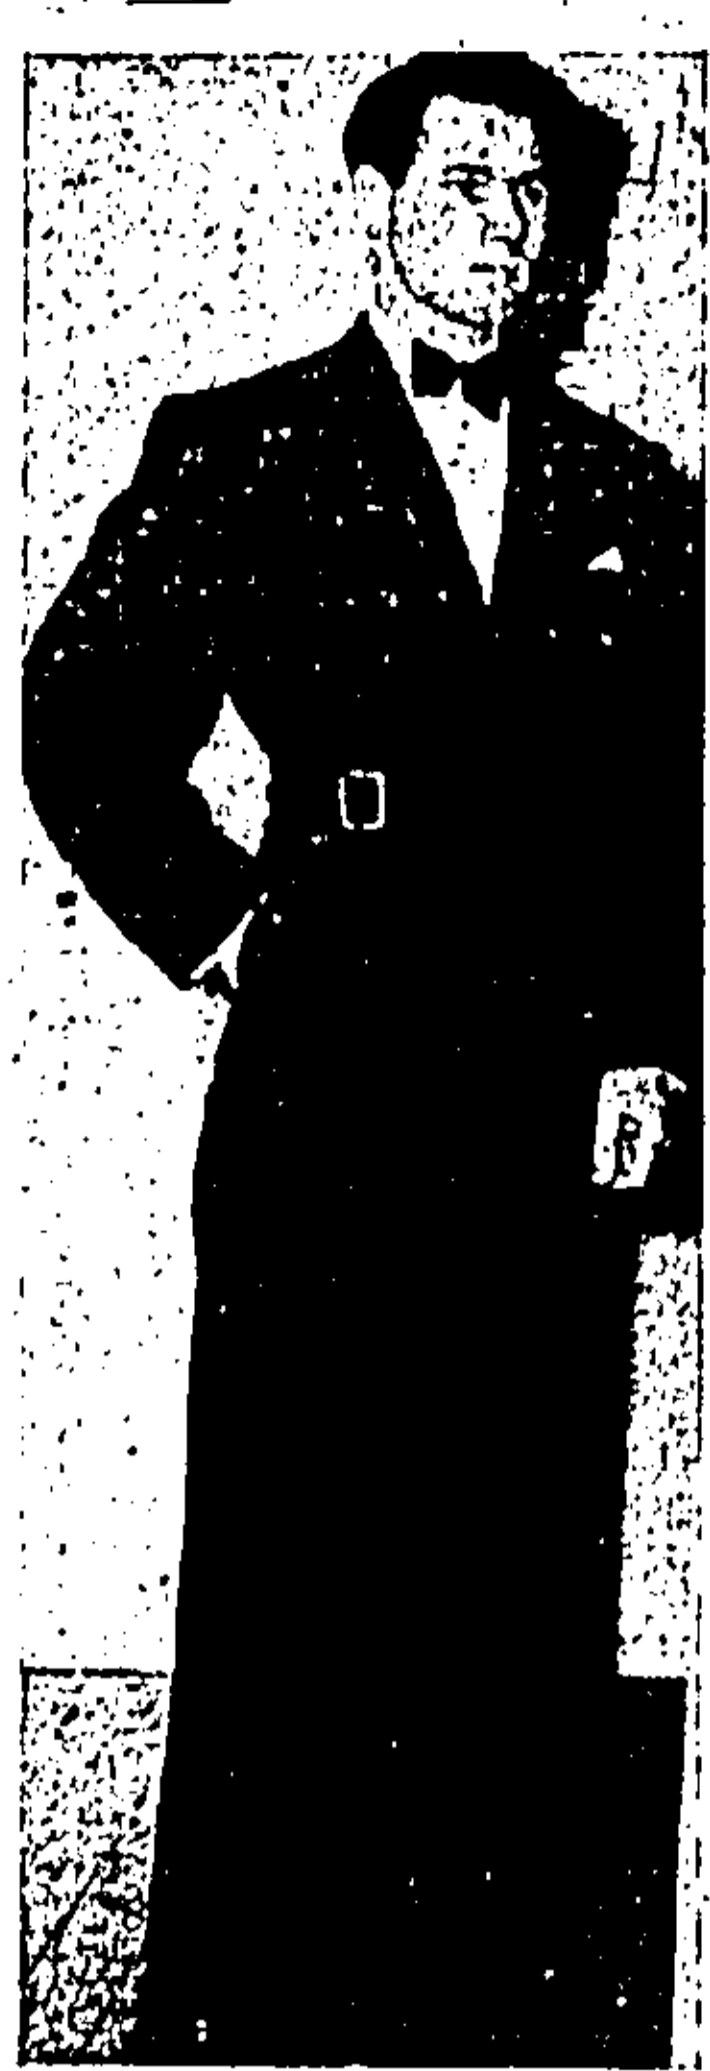

Three shipments from the Atok Gold Mining Company in Baguio, valued at 1,000,800 pesos based on the official gold price of $35 per ounce, have been sent to London. The delivery was made to London because of the availability of refinery facilities there and because of the better connections London has with the present best market for gold—the Middle East. Atok expects to get $39 per ounce, or more in London.

The price is considered to be reasonably fair in view of the higher production costs which are 20 percent higher than before the war. Atok expects daily production of 450 tons of ore in the future.—United Press.

If transferred to the Northern Ireland Civil Service.

Mr. Ede thought the transfer of these people would be a very good test of the sincerity of the wish that did not doubt himself of the remarks offered from Conservative benches that in fact no persecution existed.

Both Eire and Northern Ireland Mr. Ede said, had approached his department with the wish that the economic operation contained in the bill should be confined in the Statute Book. This, Mr. Ede added, was a considerable advance all should welcome.—Reuter.

Kissed, Threw Her In River

Montreal, June 13.
A 31-year-old unmarried mother today told the police she threw her seven-year-old daughter to her death in Richelieu River even as the child pleaded that she would behave from now on.

The mother, Cecile Proudhomme, said in a written confession: "All I heard was Maman Maman!" after she picked up the child, Angel Chanel, kissed her and threw her into the water. "I took her for a walk along the river at Richelieu," the mother said. "I told her she was a very bad girl. Angel said she would behave from now on. She said she wanted to kiss me. So I took her up in my arms for the kiss. Then I threw her into the river."

The child, whose body was found in the river last Wednesday, was believed at first to have drowned accidentally. A reported suitor of the woman, who had been told the child had been placed in an institution as a "nuisance," noticed the news items of the death and notified the police.

The woman will be charged formally with murder.—United Press.

Crossing Pacific By Raft

Washington, June 13.
The raft expedition led by Thor Heyerdahl, Norwegian explorer, appeared at about the halfway point in its cruise from the Peruvian coast to the South Pacific islands near Tahiti.

The United States Weather Bureau reported Heyerdahl's latest progress. The report gave the position at midnight GMT Thursday as six degrees 42 minutes south latitude and 108 degrees 35 minutes west longitude.

The expedition started from Peru at about 80 degrees West longitude and the islands for which it is heading lie just west of 130 degrees.

Thus the expedition appears to be on schedule because Heyerdahl estimated the cruise would take four months and they are now halfway after slightly less than seven weeks.

The latest message reported favourable wind, good visibility, with scattered clouds in the sky, a low swell from the southeast, temperature 79 degrees and a drift southwest from one to three knots.—United Press.

U.S. Warning To Rumania

Washington, June 13.
The United States has warned Rumania that prompt, adequate and effective compensation will be expected if American businesses in Rumania are unable to continue to manage their affairs as a result of the recent industrial legislation passed by the Rumanian parliament, the State Department announced to-day.

The statement said that Rumanian authorization for government control of production, distribution, domestic and foreign trade, prices, wages, profits, investments and credits is "so far-reaching that it may well result in nationalization without compensation."

The United States Mission in Bucharest, added the statement, had already made representations to the Rumanian Government regarding one measure, reserving all rights on behalf of American interests in Rumania, and stating that "prompt and effective compensation will be expected if American management is unable to continue."—Reuter.

Bradman: When I Had The Jitters

By Don Bradman
Continuing his Series, Special to the "Sunday Herald"

I doubt if I shall be privileged to participate in any more soul-stirring Cricket Tests against England—but at least I hope to see some.

I'm sure they are far more exciting for the spectator than the player.

One could argue for hours, without getting anywhere, as to which was the greatest-ever Test Match.

I don't propose to discuss events which happened long ago, but within my own memory I would say the greatest, unquestionably, was the fourth Test at Leeds in 1938.

After drawing at Nottingham and Lord's, and with the Manchester Test washed out, Hammond, as usual, beat me for the toss at Leeds, and England batted first on what appeared to be an easy wicket.

Barnett Shines

Our team bowled and fielded with such fine purpose, however, that we dismissed England for 223, and up to this stage the pitch did not favour the bowlers. We batted before stumps on the Friday, losing one wicket, and I sent in Barnett (Victorian keeper and left-hand batsman) just before the close of play to hold the fort. This move played a big part in our victory, for Ben stayed there over two hours and made 57, his highest Test score.

On the Saturday Australia fared badly, excepting Barnett and myself, and I personally found no difficulty with the wicket.

Our main trouble was the light, for it became so dark I could quite clearly see matches being lit by smokers in the grandstand. At least, I presume they were smokers. Maybe Neville Cardus was one of the culprits, for he wrote that if we didn't soon appeal against the light he would, as he couldn't see to write.

My Threats

Mervyn Waite was batting with me at the time and he wanted to appeal, but I threatened him with the penalties if he did. Rain was in the offing, and I preferred to bat on, losing wickets if need be, to gain what might be precious time.

Although we obtained a first innings lead, it was a slender one, and was soon obliterated by Fildes and Barnett, who, opening for England, had 60 on the board without loss.

On the Monday it was noticeable that the wicket was wearing fast and assisting the spin bowlers, so I decided on an attacking policy with O'Reilly and Fleetwood-Smith.

The turning point came when O'Reilly, after unsuccessfully appealing for lbw against Hardstaff, bowled a beauty that was absolutely unplayable and made a shambles of Hardstaff's stumps.

Worse followed—for England—for Hammond played his first ball to short square leg, where Brown took a glorious one-handed catch inches from the ground. From then on nothing could stop our bowlers, and the whole 10 English wickets fell for a further 53 runs.

Tense Finish

Australia were then faced with a wearing wicket and bad light with clouds banking up. Hammond had only 106 runs to spare and was afraid to use Doug Wright too early, fearing that he might give runs away. Actually, Wright, going on at 48, gave us a terrific fright by getting 3 quick wickets, and only splendid batting by Hassett kept him at bay.

The excitement was terrific. The ground was full, there were thousands of people outside clamouring to get in, and our manager (Bill James) could not bear the strain and went for a walk among the people outside.

After my dismissal I, for the only time in my life, could not bring myself to watch, but paced up and down in the dressing-room eating bread and jam and drinking copious quantities of tea, while O'Reilly, padded up, but hoping against hope he wouldn't have to bat, kept me company by helping wear out the floor covering on the opposite side.

Sydney Thrill

The suspense became worse when, with nine runs to win, rain caused a cessation of play, but the break was only a matter of minutes before we resumed and our batsmen got the runs. What a match!

The fifth Test of the last series, played at Sydney this year, which is still fresh in our minds, was another dramatic match I shall always remember, but only those present can testify to the intensity of the last half-hour's play.

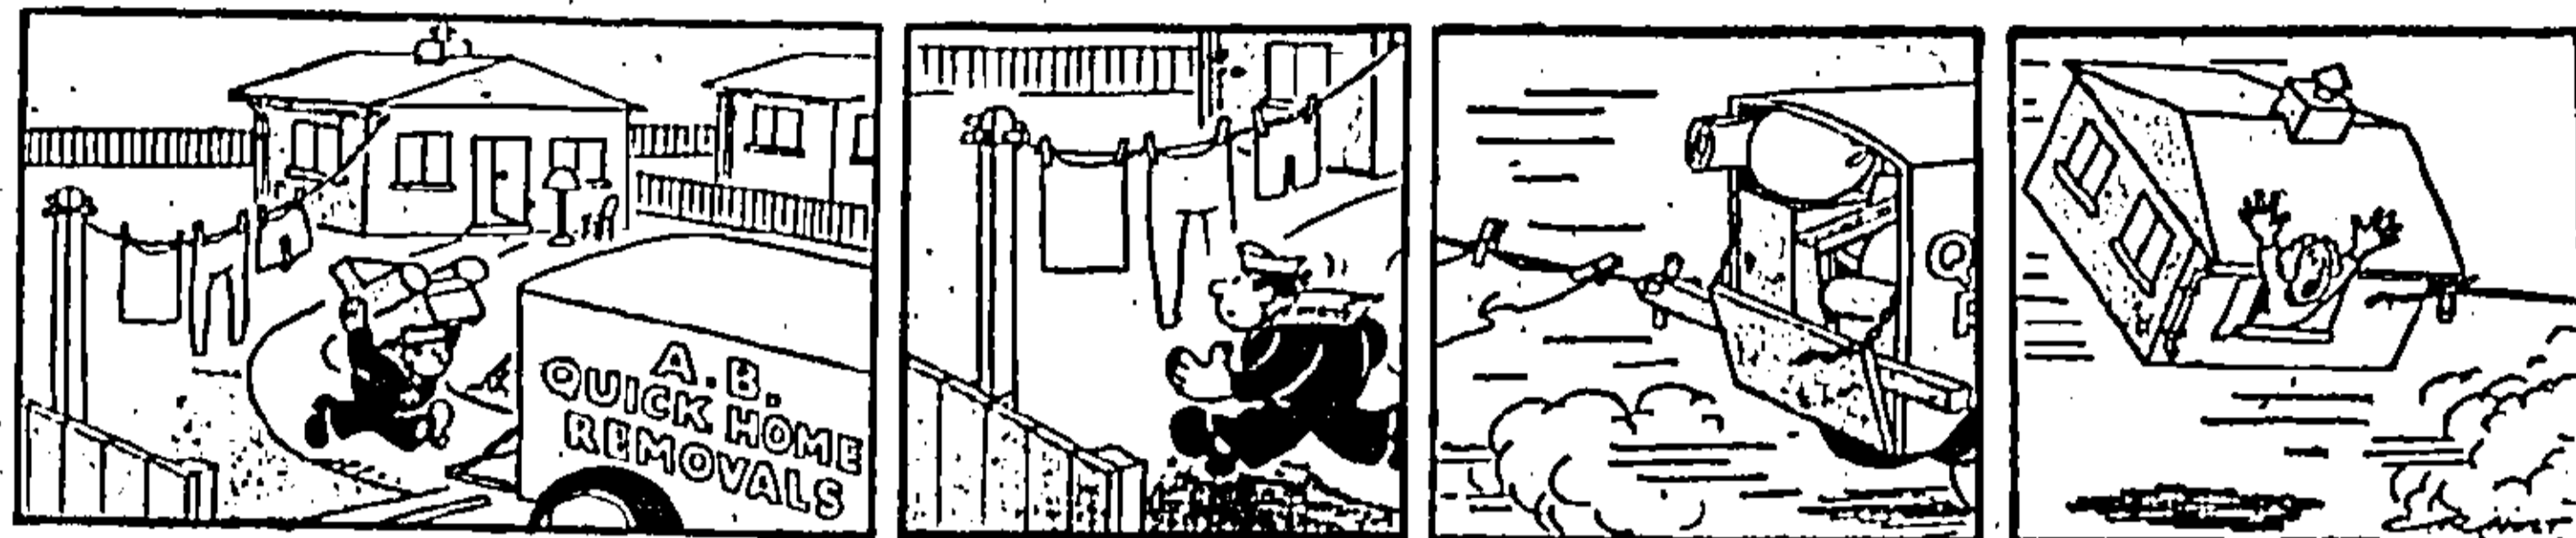

The wicket was really bad, and Wright and Bodes were on top. Miller was our main hope, and when Bodes beat him three times in succession, it looked ominous I sent a message to Miller to attack because we couldn't hope to win simply by staying there.

The crowd gasped when suddenly he lifted Bodes over mid-off for four and then twice lifted him over mid-on. Almost in an instant the match was won.

NEXT SUNDAY

Don Bradman looks to the future.

John Drummond's
Report From America

Arthur Rank Has Scared New York

NEW YORK, Monday Evening.

Mr. J. ARTHUR RANK, miller and movie magnate, is the man of the moment in America. A recent issue of Time frontpaged his picture, and devoted eleven columns of newspaper and pictures to his career. Since he landed from the Queen Elizabeth the highest in the Hollywood hierarchy have hurried, hat in hand, to pay their respects at his New York hotel.

The American film industry is scared stiff by the go-getting methods of the Methodist from Yorkshire. After a steady grind of board meetings, conferences, and business over breakfast, luncheons, teas, presentations and cocktail parties, which included the mass interview with newspapermen at which he announced that he intended to buy or build 50 cinemas in the United States as show windows for British films, Mr. Rank slipped off on a tour which will cover Chicago, Canada—and expectant Hollywood.

Television Has Teething Trouble

Before he went I managed to get ten minutes alone with him, with Mr. John Davis, his alert general manager, hovering anxiously in the background. All that was to be said had been said about films. I was interested in television, one of America's fastest growing industries, which is having more than its share of teething troubles.

From his guarded replies I predict that in the not distant future Britain's Cinema-Television Limited will follow the lead of firms like trade follows the flag, and leap the Atlantic to plunge into the fray. "I am very interested at present from the point of view of patents and the technical know-how," said Mr. Rank—showing that a few days in New York was long enough for him to pick up a favourite American abstract noun.

I suggest that with his new American associates he might clear up the jungle of cross-interests now battling in the television field here.

"Now wait," he pleaded. "Don't you think I have enough on my hands right now?" "I will be seeing somebody in Chicago about television," he admitted, and told me how he was instrumental in saving a clever inventor and technician from possible wartime imprisonment in the Isle of Man internment camp.

The television expert was an alien, and Britain would not allow him to remain in the country. "America asked for him, and he has been doing useful work here after we got him over," said Mr. Rank.

Another item, of interest to Scotland mainly, is that Mr. Rank is toying with the idea of making a film of "Brigadoon," the Broadway musical fantasy of a village which wakes up from a spell once every hundred years, against authentic Highland backgrounds.

The man Time describes as resembling General de Gaulle, "except that he does not share the look of a supercilious camel," is seeing the United States and Canada from the private railway car of Mr. Robert R. Young, whose last important guests were the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

Mr. Rank's Partner Owns Railroads Too

Mr. Young, as head of Eagle-Lion, and now J. Arthur Rank's American partner, also owns quite a few railroads in the United States. Last time I saw him he justified his reputation for being a small but opinionated rebel at a Waldorf-Astoria dinner, by talking at length on American isolation being the only foreign policy worthy of consideration.

So much so that Mr. Hector McNeill, British Under-Secretary of State, sitting on the platform beside him, nearly shook off his head in denial at various points of the speech.

As a man whose family fortune came originally from milling, Mr. Rank will be interested to see from his observation car windows the greatest wheat avalanche in history begin to pour towards the ports.

The biggest crop of wheat ever produced in the world is due on the market in the United States at the end of this month.

It augurs well for the end of bread rationing in Britain. But the snags are transportation and storage facilities. There are not enough freight cars in the world to handle the crop. Wheat will spill over from the trucks, sheds and elevators like a gritty tidal wave.

The Santa Fe Railroad, biggest grain hauling line, are pressing every available piece of rolling stock into service, but the men at the major grain terminals shake their heads doubtfully.

Out Of the Mouths Of Babes.....

Two youngsters, neither more than six years old, stood on my Tarrytown doorstep clutching small bunches of wild violets—plucked from under the trees across the street. "Buy some flowers?" demanded the smaller, pushing them forward. "Only a nickel a bunch." "A nickel a bunch?" echoed my wife. "Isn't that rather expensive?" "Lady," said Junior scornful-

Smoke Your Penicillin

Rochester, N.Y., June 13.

A revolutionary—and much more pleasant—method of administering penicillin, by "smoking" rather than injection, has been perfected by two University of Rochester medical school faculty members.

No more will it be necessary to subject to those unpleasant shots, said Drs. George V. Taplin and Fred A. Bryan. Under their technique, the drug is ground into microscopically fine dust and inhaled without discomfort with an equally good effect. The dust, when blown into the air, looks like smoke.

The two physicians revealed they developed their new method to overcome the "wasteful and laborious" means of administering modern drugs by the "aerosol" principle—vaporizing solutions of them for inhalation.

The "smoke" method, they declared, requires smaller amounts of penicillin to produce a concentration of the drug in the blood. Furthermore, they said, the concentration will last longer, even up to 24 hours. Other methods last only about three hours.

Thus, one dose of the drug by inhalation of the "smoke" is equivalent to eight hypodermic injections at three-hour intervals.

The new method has an added advantage in that the powdered penicillin will retain its potency for three years. Solutions of the drug must be kept in extremely cold temperatures and even then lose their strength within a week.

The "smoke" method employs a smaller instrument similar to an atomizer. It is a transparent plastic tube, about three inches long, and as round as a human thumb. A rubber bulb is attached at a small nozzle projecting from the opposite end. You squeeze the bulb and a cloud of "smoke" rolls out of the nozzle.

One could easily take 100,000 units of penicillin in a few minutes this way.

The method particularly is useful in treating infections of the lungs and other parts of the respiratory tract. It serves to put the drug to work right at the seat of the infection with remarkable effects.

But do not get the idea that you can buy a package of the penicillin "smoke" at the nearest drug store yet. Thus far, Dr. Taplin and Dr. Bryan have prepared the powder themselves in a small home-made mill. But they expect that when the method comes into wider use, drug supply firms will furnish it already powdered in capsule form.—United Press.

AMBULANCE SERVICES

For a city of its size, Hong Kong has, by and large, probably one of the least efficient accident services in the world. No-one is particularly to blame and it is not necessary to go deeply into an analysis of the reasons for this state of affairs. The faults are little ones but they are precisely the faults that led to frequent complaints in pre-war days: ambulances attached to hospitals are reserved for conveyance of pre-arranged hospital cases; ambulances attached to Fire Brigade stations and assigned responsibility for the prompt handling of street accidents and emergency cases sometimes do their work as it should be done, and sometimes do not. Victims of street accidents are, if not often, far too often, left lying unattended long enough to stir observers to exasperation and protest. Whether the fault is that of an untrained telephone clerk, or whether that of the system, time out of number less concern appears to be exercised over getting a person to hospital for urgent medical attention than over attempts to establish, prior to action, who is prepared to pay the official token fee. Somewhere along the line, the official system, tried as it must be to rules and regulations, fails to produce the smooth-running simplicity of the ideal service, leaving out of account the question of capable on-the-spot first-aid in severe accident cases. For these reasons, it is welcome news that the St. John Ambulance Brigade and Association is planning to make a determined effort to provide both Hong Kong and Kowloon with emergency ambulance services, to be available day and night. The immediate aim is to post at least two ambulances in Hong Kong and one in Kowloon, always ready to proceed in response to a call, manned by Ambulance Brigade members and staff, and maintained and operated exclusively by the Brigade. This, however, will cost money. Indications are that the ambulances themselves will be forthcoming from prominent supporters of the Association, but the cost of maintenance of this service, which will meet one of the most urgent public needs of the moment, must come from public donations. In support of its campaign, by which it is hoped to raise at least $150,000, a Flag Day is being organised and will be held next Saturday, but the bulk of the fund must come from direct subscriptions by well-wishers of the St. John Ambulance Brigade which has so long a record of useful service to this community. Even today, the reorganised Brigade has more than 400 volunteer members and over one hundred nurses working in numerous ways for the public weal. More than 400,000 vaccinations were, for instance, carried out by St. John Ambulance Brigade members during the menacing smallpox outbreak in October of last year. The present bid to enlarge the scope of the Brigade's activities therefore deserves every encouragement, and not merely because the organisation itself represents what is generally described as a "worthy cause" but because experience in times past has demonstrated over and over again that the Brigade gives back in service to this community far more than the monetary value of the financial contributions it receives. It will take time and energy and enthusiasm to bring the Brigade up to the standards that commanded our respect and admiration in pre-war days. But the street ambulance project is something which can be readily organised now, and furthermore, can immediately prove to be of the highest practical value. It will, we feel confident, command itself to the community's most generous support.

Italy Seeks Another Strong Man

Says Prudence James

Three years ago British and American troops entered Rome after a weary, slogging battle up the peninsula. Today, once more in summer garb, the British and American forces are still in the city.

Although fewer in number and to a large extent a much younger bunch than those who first entered the capital, they nevertheless form a token force, due to remain here until 90 days after the ratification of the Italian Peace Treaty, signed in Paris on February 10.

Ratification day, originally planned for some time in March and then in April, was then given an indefinite date, but that ratification has not taken place on that day either.

Chaos May Lead To Civil War

Italians who, only a few months ago, were expressing themselves delighted at "getting their own country back again" have changed their minds as the possibility of departure looms nearer. It has even been suggested that even a token presence of British and Americans in this country, a factor openly hinted at in some quarters.

Italy today is in a chaotic state economically, and is lacking leadership. Continued lack of crises and petty squabbling among the 18 Parliamentary parties represented in the Constituent Assembly have destroyed much of the faith in democratic government, hailed as such a boon only a short time ago.

There is now a general hankering for a really strong man to lead Italy and to tell the people what to do.

For more than 20 years Italy was spared the worry of thinking for herself and of the responsibilities that went with such a right. Now, confronted with the freedom to find themselves still bewildered and groping.

This is undoubtedly one reason why the Communists, best organised in Italy's crowded political arena, have made so much progress.

The Communists, among all the parties, have been most definite about what they want and what they stand for.

Solution Tomorrow—Inflation Today

Many Italians with whom I have spoken say frankly now, although they took an opposite view not so long ago, that it would have been better if Britain and America had taken over the task of telling them what to do, rather than leave it to a country which thinks that all will be right tomorrow. When British troops entered Sicily they called it "The Land of Domani," for authorities, or individuals, asked to do something, frequently pleaded that it should be done "domani"—tomorrow.

Today Italy looks to tomorrow for its solutions. Meanwhile prices rocket and inflation is reflected in the depreciation of the lira, now 2,000 to the pound, compared with 900 at the beginning of the year.

Clothes, which are auctioned, cost anything from 40 for a suit and 45 for a shirt, while summer frocks cost in the neighbourhood of 45. Food is plentiful but dear, and such things as portable typewriters cost 432 10s. and pianos 41,000.

In the last six months there has hardly been a week without somebody striking for more pay, and the increases which have followed have inevitably brought increases in prices.

Italy today is without a popular leader. It is significant that there is no reasonably young man who can capture the support of Italy.

The future of Italy, both politically and economically, is much discussed in an abstract academic way over the coffee table, while the disputants sip their wine.

The rivals argue over the wisdom of returning to a monarchy, or the advantages of a Communist State, but such arguments are rather for wordy exchanges with the ultimate comment that the solution will be found "domani."

STRONG MEAT FOR BABES
By SCRUTATOR

The Labour Party's annual conference took place at Margate in a mood different from that of 1946. Last year's meeting was the first since the party's victory, and naturally it overflowed with exultation and enthusiasm. Since then there have been sobering events. The party leaders can still plume themselves on successes—the progress of their ambitious Bills, for example, and on the whole record of the by-elections. But two menacing clouds darken the horizon. One looms from the economic side—the persistent hardships that the country suffers, the peril in which it stands, and the poor show made by Ministers in dealing with such major shortages as fuel and housing. The other arises from the split in the Labour ranks over foreign policy.

Foreign affairs are never an easy subject for democracy to handle. Upon domestic issues it is the democratic practice to expect from Ministers a full disclosure of facts and motives as they see them. But no Foreign Secretary can be candid in that degree. He must always remember not merely whom he is speaking to, but whom he is speaking about; and a certain amount of intelligence must be present among his immediate listeners if they are not to be misled by the reticences and understatement which the requirements of diplomacy impose upon him.

Something like this happened in 1906-14. The flood-tide of Liberal success at the polls had washed into Parliament a good many cranks or ignoramuses; and Sir Edward Grey (as he then was), confronted with the mounting manifestations of Hohenzollern aggression which were to culminate in the 1914 war, was never free to explain the real mainspring of his policies. Mr. Bevin is in a similar position. Once more a party flood-tide has left on the Government benches in the House of Commons an embarrassing sediment of ill-judging or ill-informed members. And once more in face of the aggressions of a foreign Power the Foreign Secretary has never been able to state in their full cogency the overwhelming reasons which have impelled him to take the line that he has.

An Exposure

To overcome this difficulty Mr. Bevin's friends had recourse to a special expedient. In advance of the Socialist Conference they issued a pamphlet on the foreign situation. It was anonymous, and thus escaped the personal implications which would attach to a direct utterance by the Prime Minister or the Foreign Secretary. But it carried significant authority. The device is one used constantly by the Soviet Government in their technique of direct utterances by Mr. Stalin or Mr. Molotov are reserved for comparatively rare occasions—usually when the purpose is not to blame, but to reassure. Their daily essays in international fault-finding take the form of articles in the newspapers "Pravda" or "Izvestia"—official and authoritative, but anonymous and impersonal. The new pamphlet, "Cards on the Table", has nothing of the nagging rasp of the Russians, but it does tell the Labour public, with unprecedented frankness, what the Anglo-Russian alliance is and how it has arisen. Russia in 1945 had two policies to choose between—a close alliance with Great Britain without expansion, or an expansionist policy involving the elimination of Great Britain as a Middle Eastern and indeed as a European Power. She chose the latter, and at once opened a "sustained and violent offensive" against Britain everywhere. The onslaught took two forms. One was a series of propaganda attacks through the United Nations and the International Communist machine, which aimed at isolating Britain morally as a decadent reactionary Power. The other was an attempt to tip the scales against Britain in important strategic areas by diplomacy or direct action—in Trieste, Northern Persia, the Dardanelles, Greece, Turkey and Eastern Europe.

The pamphlet does good service by bringing to daylight the enormous malignance of the Soviet's anti-British propaganda. Circulated in fifty countries in much more than fifty languages, it went largely unnoticed by the British public. It conformed to the maxim of Hitler (derived by him from the Viennese Socialists)—to overwhelm your enemy, when you have chosen who he shall be, with a "drumfire of columns". Not that Britain has ever been overwhelmed, or has failed to clear herself in any case submitted to the United Nations; but as the pamphlet says, "much of the mud stuck". Yet, although we were not unscathed, the Russian plan, according to the pamphlet, has thus far failed. It failed partly because the British Government "stood patiently firm against Russian encroachment", and partly because American public opinion to Britain's aid. Mr. Truman's March declaration is rightly hailed as "the most dramatic example" of support for Britain. One might have thought that, following an analysis which begins with "Britain wantonly attacked by Russia and continues with a British saved by American intervention, the pamphlet would have stressed the predominant need for Britain and America to walk together. But whether or not out of deference to the anti-American sentiment of the Labour Left wing, this is not the conclusion drawn. Instead, much stress is laid on certain episodes during Mr. Bevin's term in which British policy opposed American, and on the Foreign Secretary's present aim "to obtain an alliance with Stalin which will associate Britain as closely with Russia as with the United States." As if the difference between Washington's ethics and Moscow's, could still for practical purposes be ignored; or as if the suggestion to ignore it were made any more palatable by adding, that "the condition of such an alliance is that it should not aim at isolating America!"

Russia's Socialist Myth

The plain exposure of the Soviet world-wide campaign against Great Britain exasperated the Left wing at the conference. Nor did they enjoy any more the equally plain characterisation of Russia's attitude towards the United Nations—her lack of faith in any international rule of law, and her cynical "use of international institutions" to national secure an immediate advantage, or as a convenient mechanism by which the moral principles of others are exploited. Yet within the last few months these features have been too manifest to be gainsaid. The pamphlet still tolerates the myth of a Socialist bond between Moscow and London. It is, we read, "a major tragedy of Socialist history" that the arrival of "pro-Soviet Labour Governments" in Britain coincided with the anti-British offensive by Russia. But surely the explanation is not far to seek. The internal policy of the Soviet may or may not be Marxian, but it conforms to the ideas of liberty held by Hardie or Snowden or William Morris. But its foreign policy is neither Socialist nor Marxian. It revolves the old Russian policy of trying to annex the Near and Middle East, as practised under the Tsars.

Few people in the nineteenth century saw more clearly than Karl Marx did the threat which that carried for all Western Europe. Born in the Rhineland, he was a West European by instinct and on Russian issues a definite supporter of Disraeli. There could be no greater irony than to claim for Moscow's revived aggressions the cloak of Marx's name. Their real sponsor is Peter the Great.

MEN, WOMEN AND MEMORIES

By ATTICUS

Mr. Jan Masaryk hopes to visit England this month. As a Foreign Minister he claims to have travelled a greater mileage by sea, land and air than any of his colleagues, and I doubt if anyone will contest his assertion. He is not on official business but to visit old friends. He still retains his flat in Westminster Gardens.

He is today, entirely on his own merits, almost as popular a figure in his own country as his late father, the great President Masaryk. Mr. Masaryk's command of English is the envy of his diplomatic colleagues. Like Joseph Conrad, he learned it late. When in 1906 he went to the United States as a young man of twenty he had only a smattering acquired from American toughs in Prague which he assumed were normal endearments. When he first arrived in Chicago he was invited to a club to meet the local manager of the Standard Oil Company. The big boss offered him a drink, and Mr. Masaryk, using what he thought was the appropriate American slang, replied: "Thank you very much, son of a something." He found himself on the floor with a bleeding nose.

The Standard Oil tycoon raised him to his feet and said with genuine Yankee friendliness: "Young man, that blow was meant in all kindness. It will be, I hope, a lesson to you that there are certain expressions you must not use in this country."

Kindness Pays

Recalling that he was in a strange new world, Mr. Masaryk decided to learn boxing. With his height and weight he soon became proficient. Three months later, as an employee of the famous millionaire firm of Crane, he was walking home late at night when he was accosted by a beggar who asked for alms. As Mr. Masaryk hesitated, the beggar suddenly produced a gun. "Hand over your wad," he said.

Mr. Masaryk's reply was a straight left to the chin and a right on the solar plexus. The beggar collapsed on the pavement. Mr. Masaryk picked him up, helped him to revive and then said to him: "Why do you have to do this sort of thing?" The man mumbled that he was out of a job and had four starving children. Mr. Masaryk thought quickly. "Look," he said, "having knocked you down, I can't give you a job in my own firm, but, if you promise to go straight, I'll give you a letter to our rivals."

He was as good as his word. Since then, for more than forty years, he has received a Christmas letter of thanks from his former assailant, who not only made good but became a very efficient foreman with the rival firm.

The New Foreign Office

The "news" that the Foreign Office is to be rebuilt in Carlton House Terrace is not new. The plan has been under consideration for some time. Like other plans it will, with our depleted resources, be a long time before it reaches completion. Even lovers of the old building must admit that the reform is badly needed.

The present edifice has a curious architectural history. The original plan was prepared by Sir Gilbert Scott in 1860. It was Gothic in design and was rejected by Lord Palmerston on the ground that it would be "admirable for a monastery." He wanted something on the lines of a Venetian palace as more light and more cheerful. He also demanded the substitution of square-headed windows for the religious gloom which would have been unsuited to late hours of work. Scott, sorely against his will, sold himself to the Palmerston devil. Reluctant to abandon his original plan, he found an opportunity of using it for the Midland Railway. St. Pancras Station is today what, but for Palmerston, the Foreign Office would have been.

Hand-Writing Tyrant

The Foreign Office still retains at least one relic of Palmerston. Typewriters being unknown in his day, he was a great stickler for clear handwriting. In the room of the private secretaries to the Under-Secretary of State there hangs a Palmerstonian minute encased in a wooden frame. It runs as follows:

The greater portion of the Foreign Office hands are excellent.

MAKING IT MORE DEADLY

Research Into New Forms Of Warfare

Bacteriological Bomb

London, June 13. Researches into two new forms of warfare, probably more deadly than the atom bomb, are now taking place in Britain. They are the radioactive "cloud" and the bacteriological bomb. Bacteriological research is taking place at a special station in Southern England where nearly 200 technicians are employed. Well-informed sources in London, giving this information today, said that the United States now has a small number of bacteriological bombs ready. These are in addition to the new type of atomic bombs in store—believed to be more than 100.

The atomic energy plant at Chalk River, Canada, could, it is assumed, provide deadly radioactive substances needed for "atomic cloud" warfare. These substances are available in discharges from atomic piles which produce "ingredients" for the atomic energy already working there.

Another source of these radioactive substances is the British Atomic Energy establishment at Harwell, Berkshire. Professor J. D. Cockcroft, head of the British atomic energy project, hinted significantly at this source when he said: "We shall have to solve the problem of disposal of radioactive products which would be produced as a by-product in very large intensities."

Serious Danger

"These products can be a serious danger to health if they are dispersed in concentrated form."

Work is also going ahead in Britain and Australia on the development of guided projectiles. There is a station for this work in Buckinghamshire.

The British effort is directed towards improving the propulsive force of the rocket. Only small experiment types are being fired in this country—they are sent far out into the Atlantic.

The firing of major rocket units takes place in Australia where the work is handled by an organisation headed by Lieutenant-General J. F. Eyllis, known as Long-Range Weapons Organisation.

New Strategy

Observers here begin to see in these developments what might be a new conception of British global strategy.

The vulnerability of Britain in the event of another war and the need for dispersal of her major industries is in fact the key to this new plan, under which each Dominion is to be encouraged to develop one sphere of activity to fit into the strategic scheme.

Australia already has a rocket range and is earmarked for full-scale researches into guided projectiles. Canada is believed to be the proposed base for the atomic section. The setting up of an atomic range in the frozen wastes where experiments with radioactive "clouds" could be carried out in safety is forecast within the near future. New Zealand's role is seen as supplementary to that of Australia.

Unsinkable Carrier

South Africa, which has already begun to build its own aircraft, would play a role in the next war similar to that played in the last war by Britain and Malta—that of an unsinkable aircraft carrier—informed observers here say.

The success of the recent record-breaking flights from London to the Cape and the vast possibilities of refuelling planes in the air—now being developed in Britain—are important factors to be considered.

A prototype of the Brabazon airliner, the world's greatest aircraft, which will shortly take the air, is also a key to the overall plan. A military version of this mammoth plane could be refuelled in the air, bombard any part of the world and return to its distant base.

The role of India in this Commonwealth strategic plan is obscure until the political situa-

Millionaire Professor In Scandal

Paris, June 14. The most serious financial scandal to shake France since the recent "Black Max Intrator" affair has occurred with one of France's most illustrious men, 73-year-old Professor Gustave Roussy, chief of all Paris education, being named as heading currency frauds totalling £140,000.

So damaging is the scandal that the French Cabinet itself has taken up the affair and decided to arraign Professor Roussy before a disciplinary court.

This was after Premier Ramadier, the Lord Privy Seal, and other Cabinet Ministers were called together at a special secret session to hear the disclosures.

Professor Roussy, millionaire Rector of Paris University, with a world reputation as a member of the Science Academy and founder of France's Cancer Institute, who has been crowned with France's highest honours, has meanwhile been suspended from office. He is on provisional liberty.

Rich Man

Charges against him are that, when in 1945 all French bank notes were called in against a new issue, he employed his lawyer, M. Decloux, to change £40,000-worth of Treasury bonds under the name of a Spanish refugee, "Diez Paro," so as to avoid taxation. French Treasury experts uncovered the transaction when examining the books of the lawyer, who has been charged with complicity.

In addition, the Treasury police are investigating further charges against the professor involving fraudulent dealings in £100,000 worth of Swiss francs.

French Surete finance squad experts under Inspector Perez Y Jorba, who led the Max Intrator swoops, have been busy searching Roussy's chambers in the Academy of Science, Swiss-born Professor Roussy, cancer specialist and reputedly among the richest men in France, with a sumptuous palace-villa and a

METEOR JETS IN EAST

Singapore, June 13. Two Gloster "Meteor" jet-propelled fighters under the command of Wing Commander H. A. C. Bird-Wilson today began a series of flights to test their performance in the tropics. The aircraft, accompanied by experts from the Gloster Aircraft works, were shipped recently from Britain. The tests can only be carried out during the early morning and late afternoon as the mid-day humidity makes flying conditions too "lumpy" for safe high-speed flying.—Reuter.

tion there is resolved after the British transfer of power.

One thing is certain, say observers here, if Hindustan, and Pakistan choose to remain within the framework of the Commonwealth, much of the mineral resources of India would be at the disposal of the Commonwealth defence forces.

Expansion of basic industries in India, particularly the aircraft industry, is another factor which cannot be overlooked.—Reuter.

What Tito Is Trying To Do

Athens, June 14. That Marshal Tito aims to create a free State of Macedonia with Florina as its capital, is the opinion of the Greek General Staff. This opinion is also shared by many high Greek Government officials.

The recent attack by some 1,500 bandits on Florina is regarded as part of a carefully planned attempt to gain control over a wide area of Northern Greece which could then be proclaimed "free", and subsequently brought inside the Yugoslav Federation of People's Republics.

The attempt was completely foiled, and it is thought extremely unlikely that a similar attempt will be repeated elsewhere.

The Greek Army's strength in Northern Greece is now considerable and is being reinforced, and a large increase of military supplies is expected shortly from abroad. The morale of the troops is high, and that of the bandits is declining.—Our Own Correspondent.

Girl's Home To Be Searched

Paris, June 13. A French police inspector was today ordered to search the Paris home of Elizabeth Lazarus, the French Jewish girl who was arrested in Belgium, and alleged to have been found in possession of letter-bombs of the type sent to leading British politicians.

Orders for the search came after the chiefs of Scotland Yard, Britain's police headquarters, conferred with the Paris police for three-quarters of an hour this morning.

According to a French police official, the British Embassy in Paris is taking part in the affair, "since the letters were inscribed only to addresses in England."

Another official said the girl and a man named Jacobs were still in custody in Belgium.—Reuter.

...WOMEN IN REVOLT...

A band of British women are on the march. I talked last week with four of the women who are leading the march. THELMA CAZALET KEIR, IRENE LOVELOCK, JUANITA FRANCES and FLORENCE WHITE.

Their names will go down in history with the pioneers of the struggle against the prejudice of the male—Nightingale, Pankhurst, Bondfield, Wilkinson...

Mrs. Lovelock is the wife of a country parson. She is no fanatic. She was a quiet, homely little woman who became suddenly indignant in a queue at the greengrocer's. A feeble-old-age pensioner could not buy potatoes because she could not afford to buy peas.

Petty Tyrants

Mrs. Lovelock went home to her husband. She borrowed his parish hall and held a meeting. It was the first time she had addressed an audience.

Today, the British Housewives' League—born in the indignation of that meeting—is one of the most active women's organisations in the country.

In a quiet, pleasant voice she told me: "Men have landed themselves and their women-folk into two world wars in a generation. It was sheer mismanagement, bungling if you like."

"I don't say that men want war, but they have a natural love of a good spar, and it is the women who suffer."

"I would much prefer to be a man and go into the Army and do as I was told than stay behind to guard the children, face up to the bombs, get the food, do the housework, make coupons perform impossible things and worry about my husband at the front."

I asked her what she intended to do about it. She said: "We are out to end dictatorship—the dictatorship of the shopkeeper, the food officer and all the dominating, petty tyrants who treat women like children."

"We are sick of being treated like naughty girls. We are tired of being laughed at and talked down to by Ministers and Civil Servants."

"But our first aim is to get more food and get the food into the homes not the canteens, schools, hotels and restaurants."

The quiet little parson's wife suddenly became the indignant woman who founded a great movement.

"Every good mother today is practically starving," she said. "The best food goes to her children and her husband. Even then the children cannot get enough."

"We are bringing up a nation of undernourished children. The doctors know it. Why don't they speak out and say so?"

Food And Homes

"There is too much talk about dollars and not enough about food. Food must have priority. Then we can work and we can earn the dollars or anything else."

Suddenly she asked me: "Do you think there is any political motive in keeping our rations short? Rationing is breaking up family life. It is destroying the home as the communal centre."

"The Government is taking on more and more work that belongs to the motor. I mean school meals, school milk and things like that."

"All women are being treated on the level of the most unintelligent and slovenly mother who cannot or doesn't care about the home and the family. There are some women who can't cook. But most of us can."

The Women Behind The Political Movement in Britain Which Led Last Week To A Fracas In The Albert Hall Are Described In This Article by

JOHN RALPH

Food and the home is not enough. There must be equal pay for equal work.

A Bigger Risk

Mrs. Cazalet Keir, as Parliamentary Secretary, to a former Minister of Education, defied her Minister and Mr. Churchill on the question of equal pay.

She is dark and vivacious. She is a good Conservative. But, first of all, she is a woman. She sat, luxuriously, in her Park Lane flat and told me:

"The fight for equal pay is nearly won. Once the principle of equal pay is accepted in Government offices, industry will soon follow suit."

"We are told by the Government that it would not be fair to industry—it could not afford it."

"But the Government is willing to enforce the five-day, 40-hour week and that is a far bigger risk than equal pay. And it is not merely a matter of money—it is a matter of justice."

I asked her if there wasn't a danger that careers might be too inviting, that marriage might, take second place and that, after all, a woman...

"No," said Mrs. Cazalet Keir emphatically. "We don't want a nation of career girls, but simply equal status for the women who are in business."

She added thoughtfully: "The home must be the centre of life, but not necessarily the boundary."

Before I left she said: "Things have reached a point where, soon, the Government will not be able to refuse the demand for equal pay."

It sounded something like a warning!

Vain Sacrifice

Miss White, a doughty five-foot five and champion of Britain's spinners, gave a crushing answer to my question: "Why shouldn't bachelors get a pension at 55?"

She said: "There is no comparison. Men are built to work longer than women. They have not the same responsibilities."

"At 55 many women have been working—slaving—for more than 40 years. Many of them are women who have forsaken everything in life to care for parents, orphans or sick relatives to their own matrimonial undoing."

"There are about 150,000 injured spinners. Another 2d. charge on insurance contributions would cover our demand—pensions for all spinners of 55—at a cost of about £10,000,000."

Domestic Diplomacy

Juanita Frances, of the Married Women's Association, had just finished her shopping. She put down the basket and exclaimed: "Shopping. It takes as much tact and brilliance as a diplomatic coup."

Juanita Frances has a business-like mind. She went on:

"A woman does a job before she marries, earns her wage-packet, and has all the rights of a worker. She marries—and exchanges everything for a few meaningless phrases like 'The wonderful wives of Britain', 'The mothers are the most important people.'"

"And all her life is in the hands of her husband. If he is a good husband, she works willingly. If he is mean and thoughtless she still carries on or sees her children suffer."

"The woman has no right to property or money if there is a divorce. Even the money she earns is subject to the bias of a court of justice—and the bias is usually against her."

Juanita and the Married Women's Association are considering the next step. A deputation to the Attorney-General has already demanded legislation which would bring a financial "partnership" in the home and give the wife equal legal "rights."

On The March

The spinners who have sacrificed marriage... the wives who have made the sacrifice of marriage... Mrs. Lovelock and men and their two wars... Mrs. Cazalet Keir indignant about equal pay.

What is the solution? A Government of women?

They have the numbers, they have the votes, they have rights.

BUT—the ability to rule? The dispassionate judgment? The true sense of fair play? The strength to be objective—to see the troubles of the nation while family ailments are pressing? These are the questions to be faced.

Colour

★ makes all the difference

Says EDNA McKENNA

LONDON Pride pink (a subtle shade between dusty pink and sugar pink), turquoise, royal blue, hunter's green, corn, cinnamon and field poppy are among the lovely colours fashionable this season. And there is news that for Autumn will be added to these lots of ice-blue, lichen and apple green, off-white, biscuit-beige and Paris grey.

These colours are most flattering and are bound to make a tremendous appeal to women, but when buying, the well-dressed woman will carefully study her own colouring before making her choice. This is the first essential of chic.

So it is wise to take an escort on your shopping expedition—a woman with a tasteful dress sense—and before you buy your material, dress, coat or suit, hold it up to your face and let her decide whether it is the right tone for your hair, your eyes and skin.

Then, having chosen your ensemble, remember that make-up must be just as thoughtfully matched up with your personal colouring. Here is a chart that should prove a useful guide.

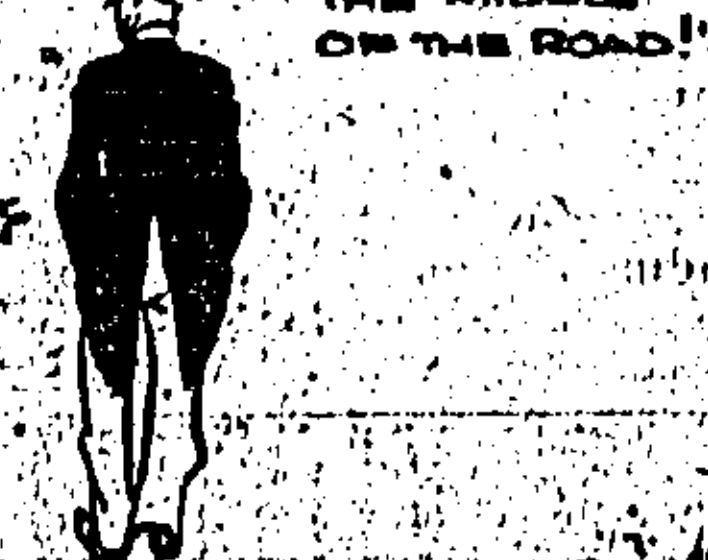

YOU	YOUR CLOTHES	YOUR FACE
Pure blonde, with blue or grey eyes.	Black and marmalade. (Marmalade is the palest shade of turquoise.)	Palest shell—pink natural powder. Clear red lipstick and rouge!
More average fair girl.	Dark turquoise, with honey-coloured accessories.	Natural to peach powder, peachy-red lipstick and rouge.
Auburn girl.	Hunter's green and off-white or biscuit-beige.	Light—honey rachel powder. Yellowish red lipstick and rouge.
Red—head, whether freckled or not.	Corn and nigger brown.	Rose rachel powder, or pale cream if the skin is very fair. Orange-tinted red lipstick and rouge.
Girl with mid-brown hair.	Royal blue and oyster or cinnamon and deep cream or dark brown.	Cream powder. Theatrical red lipstick and rouge.
Dark brunettes.	Field Poppy, with brown or dark grey.	Dark rachel powder. Bright red vermilion lipstick and rouge.
Fair-skinned brunettes.	London, Pride and navy.	Peach powder, or pale rachel. Cyclamen-red lipstick and rouge.
Grey-haired woman with fair skin.	Burgundy and ice-blue. (Paris grey would be a second choice with burgundy.)	Rich creamy powder, with pinkish tone. Burgundy red lipstick and rouge.
Grey-haired woman with dark skin.	Apple green or lichen green, and black.	Dark cream powder. Dark red lipstick and rouge.

HAIR TO-DAY

—in Paris

By MARIE-ALIX LAMOTTE

Drawn by Berill

and in London

By EDNA McKENNA

THE aim of all smart Parisiennes as each other but never to be entirely different. They have asked their hairdressers to create spring coiffures to help them achieve this goal.

As a result hair styles are much more varied and yet much simpler. In the morning hair is worn tossed back in apparently careless, but carefully becoming, disorder. The forehead is always free and uncovered, the hair drawn upwards and back with a couple of combs, for preference smooth and flattened with brillianting.

The curls are arranged either in a halo over the brow or allowed to fall back loosely upon the shoulders according to the wearer's type. Often a scarf is tied round the head, mingling with the curls and knotting just above one ear.

The Veronica Lake style has inspired Parisian hairdressers to create a new coiffure in which the hair is swept up or around the back of the head, leaving one side completely and leaving a mass of curls to fall over the opposite ear, making the two pictures entirely different.

In the evening everybody is wearing false chignons, some large, some small, many mere masses of curls, others clusters of curls encircled by plaits to match their own locks. Invariably the hair is swept smoothly back from the brow, leaving the crown of the head quite flat, excepting with women who really need extra height, which is provided by a single, high-bunched curl.

Still in the chignon group comes the typically Parisian "bun," worn atop the head with all ends of hair swept beneath it. Many women find it unbecoming, but strangely enough it emphasizes the attractions of the really plain woman, giving her distinction and often an unexpected beauty.

Colors are all-important and Parisiennes have always loved to dye their hair, but this season they are being more discrete about it. Platinum blondes and carrot reds are out of fashion, but a shade popular now is achieved by bleaching the hair with peroxide and ammonia as usual, and then rinsing it with a special anti-yellowing mixture. Followed by a steel-blue rinse this gives a delightful silvery blonde or light chestnut tone, both becoming and distinguished.

HAIRDRESSERS say short hair is becoming increasingly fashionable as it is so much easier to arrange than long hair. Many hairdressers are cutting the hair short at the back and slightly longer at the sides and front, to allow for a variety of styles. They introduce curls to create either a soft or a tailored effect.

For evening wear the gowns now in vogue call for hair with a bulky look, and so the addition of plaits, buns and false curls is fashionable. At one quite small hairdressing salon they sell as many as 15 to 20 plaits in a day. A figure-of-eight worn low on the nape of the neck is likely to be the most popular style of all. It gives the wearer a delightfully serene and dignified appearance.

An ash blonde that is almost dusty is the shade most in demand at the moment, and rinses have largely replaced tinting. There are now many shades obtainable and the great advantage of rinsing rather than tinting is that the rinse comes out completely at the next shampoo. If the shade does not suit the wearer there is no need to wait for it to grow out.

Be Careful With Perfume

By Victor Mamak

Of all the idiotic things some women do—and they are many even in these enlightened days—the haphazard manner in which they select their perfumes is very nearly the most stupid.

Fair, fluffy, petite Helen uses a light fresh flower scent, so girl friend Daphne goes out and buys likewise. This in spite of the fact that she is "tall, dark and handsome" rather than pretty. Could anything be more incongruous? Again so sophisticated Marianne, with her perfect poise and dignified manner, uses some subtle elusive perfume which adds the last note of chic to her personality so naturally shy little Janet dashes out and invests in a bottle of the same and wonders why she feels a fool when she uses it.

It is always wise to experiment with perfumes before you choose the one that suits your own personality best, and when you have found it see that all your toilet accessories are scented to match.

Very Sparingly

Always remember that heavy, cloying perfumes are only for the woman of striking appearance and strong personality, and, if used at all, should be very sparingly applied. Who has not, at times, stepped into a lift, a ship's cabin or a hotel lounge only to be almost knocked senseless by a reek that seizes one by the throat? There is another point about perfume which a woman must realize. It is always more apparent to other people than to the user, so don't be too lavish with it unless you have a "couldn't-care-less" attitude towards other human beings.

Never apply perfume direct to clothes or to hair. For one thing it may stain delicate fabrics, and for another stale scent is definitely unpleasant. It is much better to scent your handkerchiefs and lingerie with sachets and to apply liquid perfume to your skin. A dab of scent behind the ears, at the back of the neck just beneath the hairline, a touch on the wrist and fingertips or palms of the hands will breathe a delicate fragrance round you all through a long evening. Where as a handkerchief drenched in perfume will get stale long before the festivities are over.

In The Hat

There are all sorts of alluring ways of using sachets: these days besides popping them into your lingerie drawer. Try fixing a tiny one inside your hat—the heat from your head will bring out the perfume and scent your hair delightfully — hang two small ones on each of your coat-hangers to lend your dresses fragrance, and fix sachets in the lids of your glove and handkerchief boxes as well as tucking one inside.

A very simple rule on the choice of perfume is to remember that the light, sweet flower scents are only for the young. As you grow older change gradually to a heavier, more sophisticated perfume.

Be fastidious not only in your choice of perfume but always get the very best you can afford. A small bottle of a good perfume of a reliable make is much better than a large bottle of cheap scent that not only advertises its price but your lack of good taste to everyone with a nose in the vicinity.

Two Tips

Keep a spray filled with your favourite toilet water in the bathroom to use after your bath. It is refreshing and economical and being less concentrated, it is suitable for day use as well as for evening. Your bath talcum should match your perfume and toilet water if possible, or at any rate it should never be heavily scented and clash with either.

When the weather is sultry there is nothing so refreshing as a rub-down with eau-de-cologne followed by a dusting with talcum powder. But as warmth brings out scents, DO see that your powder and soap do not clash with your toilet water.

Here are a couple of tips that will delight you if you try them out.

1. Sprinkle a few drops of your toilet water on your lingerie before it is ironed. You will be delighted with the charming fragrance which will linger until the garment is washed again, for the heat of the iron sets the perfume.

2. Before going dancing or playing tennis dab the feet with eau-de-cologne and dust freely with talcum, your feet will be cool and comfortable all through the evening.

Shannon Systems

A NEW IDEA IN FILING

THE SYSTEM WHICH GIVES AT-SIGHT IDENTIFICATION AND ERROR-PROOF CERTAINTY.

SHANNOGRAPH FOR SPLIT-SECOND FILING — AND FINDING

First, it is flat-topped. That is, the top of each file is flat right across. That gives you a lot of space to use — name address, telephone. And there are no tabs and the like to catch in the cabinet, wear out or THUMB-FUMBLE through Your EYE spots any file at one glance.

"Shannograph" is not the ordinary suspension system. Every single folder is separately hung by steel hangers on a steel frame. The folders don't touch the cabinet. That means less wear-tear. More speed. Longer life. Less cost.

Shannograph will go in your existing cabinet or desk drawer—or on your desk-top on a side table, counter or shelf. And it's moderate in first-cost and next-door-to-nothing in upkeep cost.

Woman Of The People For London

London, June 13. The Star's columnist, who has a daily column, "The Star Man's Diary," interviewed by telephone Senora Eva Peron at Madrid and quoted her as saying: "I am looking forward to visiting London—it will be my first trip. I do not know what my programme will be, but there are lots of things I want to do.

"I am a woman of the people and I shall share what you have to eat. I am not bringing any special food with me.

"My visit is an unofficial one."

According to the columnist: "Madame Peron is bringing a dozen trunks of specially designed clothes and jewellery and said, 'My clothes are nothing special; they are merely fitting for a person of my rank. Franco has entertained me very well indeed. So have all the people here. The General accompanied me on many of my trips.'"

TOO MANY HISTORY BOOKS

Mr. Bevin On British "Imperialism"

New Conception Of Commonwealth

London, June 13. A tribute to the press of the world and the thanks and congratulations of the British Government and the Indian negotiators for the manner in which the recent negotiations in India had been handled were made by the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Ernest Bevin, when he was guest speaker at the Foreign Press Association lunch in London today.

Mr. Bevin, speaking with deep sincerity, said: "The press have risen to a great occasion. Four hundred million people are involved, and, having looked at the whole world press, I must say that the matter has been handled with the greatest restraint and nothing has made a greater contribution to the successful outcome of the difficult negotiations."

"This country looks with confidence to a new era in their relations with the people of India. Whatever may have been said about British imperialism in the past, I must claim that our civilising influence in that part of the world has been of tremendous benefit."

"It has kept down wars. It has developed great services and we have worked up to the point of handing over this great concern, these great independent states, without civil war and as a 'going concern'."

"Now and again we get statesmen who like to revive the bogey of British aggression and British imperialism."

"I wish that such people would live longer in this country and not be too obsessed by history books."

"The task that has fallen to Great Britain since the war has been to evolve a growing recognition of collaboration and growing benefits between countries of the Commonwealth, and a new conception of the value of the world 'Commonwealth' and what it means to have a large number of independent associated states making and contributing to world peace."

One Country

"In spite of defeats and setbacks under the difficulties we had in the war, Great Britain has been the one country in the world that has returned to her possessions without civil war and without very much resistance."

"She has returned to these territories, taking with her recognition of the growing aspirations of the people within them, and she has come back with new constitutions in recognition of that development.

"Instead of separating from us, these territories have remained with us."

"I believe that by remaining within the Commonwealth, they will represent something vital which will contribute ultimately to an organisation of world security and world peace."

U.S. Bridge

Mr. Bevin said that the Secretary of State, General George Marshall's speech at Harvard, advocating large-scale dollar aid to Europe "may well rank as one of the greatest speeches in world history."

"I can only say to the other nations that when the United States throws a bridge to link East and the West, it is disastrous for ideological or any other reasons to frustrate the United States in that endeavour."

"It seems to me that that great new and wonderful country with its great wealth and potential wealth has acted in the most unselfish manner to use that great capacity to save Europe from another ruin and to re-instate it as urgently as possible."

"We in this country, are exploring actively and urgently how best to respond to this lead."

"We have decided to consult France and other European nations to see how best we can take advantage of this great proposal of the United States."

MANY ARRESTS IN RUMANIA

London, June 13.

Widespread arrests in Rumania have followed the discovery of a new underground organisation called "The Brotherhood of the Cross".

The organisation is said to centre on Jassy, a university town about 300 miles northeast of Bucharest.

Those arrested consist mainly of students, teachers and officers, the radio added.—Reuter.

London Stock Exchange

London, June 13.

The market's encounter with selling pressure here and there in light trading, ending the week in a barely steady fashion. Gilt-edged were again marked down owing to the continuance of small but persistent selling pressure. Little developed in foreigners other than dullness in some Europeans.

Industrials were mixed in limited business. Iron and steels sagged but some recovery occurred in tobacco.

Kaffir half-yearly dividends have had little effect on other than price adjustment but coppers hardened further.—Reuter.

GOLD PRICE RUMOURS

Washington, June 13.

Government and Congressional officials said today that there is no possibility that the United States gold price would be raised at any time in the foreseeable future.

There are persistent rumours in New York financial circles that the price would be increased to $49 an ounce. Only Congress can change the present $35 per ounce quotation.—United Press.

Undernourishment?

not in my family!

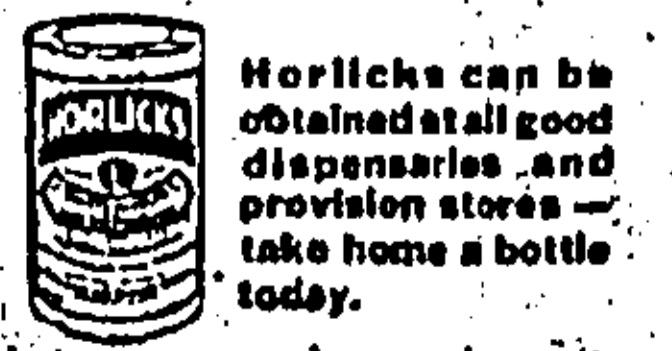

Just because there is enough food in your house does not mean that your family is properly nourished. Doctors will tell you that quality is even more important than quantity, and that nowadays our food may be deficient in elements needed in a correctly balanced diet.

To meet this situation, doctors recommend Horlicks as a supplementary food. Horlicks contains all the goodness of full-cream cows' milk to which has been added the rich, energising nourishment extracted from malted barley and wheat. As an addition to the diet it is a sure safeguard against undernourishment providing all-round nourishment for conversion into energy and body reserves. Horlicks can be made with water only—the milk is in it. Protect your family by giving them Horlicks every day.

WHAT HORLICKS IS
Horlicks is made from pure full-cream cows' milk plus the nutritive extracts of malted barley and wheat. It is a complete food containing body-building and energy-giving food-stuffs in proportions necessary for normal nutrition. Horlicks is 100% nourishment.

Horlicks can be obtained at all good dispensaries and provision stores—take home a bottle today.

The Doctor Says:—
WHEN NUTRITION IS INCOMPLETE I RECOMMEND HORLICKS BECAUSE IT IS A BALANCED MILK FOOD.

Take HORLICKS and Build up your Energy

Photograph In Nude By Her Fiance

Hamburg, June 14.

A pretty young Danish blonde faced a British military court of one Brigadier and four Colonels in Hamburg on Friday and told them: "I never knew there was a military law forbidding a girl to take off her clothes in the presence of the man she is going to marry."

She was giving evidence in the trial of Lieut. Col. R. N. J. Burgess, Royal Army Ordnance Corps, who was alleged to have taken photographs of her in the nude.

The girl, referred to as Miss X, admitted that the photographs were taken while the couple were sunbathing in the grounds of the Officers' Mess of the unit the Colonel commanded near Hamburg.

The photographs, which were stated to have been found when a Special Investigation Branch officer searched Col. Burgess' room, were handed to the court for inspection.

Colonel Burgess pleaded not guilty to two charges of scandalous conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman, referring to the photograph incident and to several occasions—when Miss X was alleged to have slept with him in the Officers' Mess.

"Interference."

Miss X declared she hoped to marry Col. Burgess and complained of "this interference in our private lives."

Col. Burgess did not give evidence, but made a statement about his career in which he revealed that he had applied for a regular army commission.

The court found the accused not guilty on a charge of conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in assisting Miss X to bring coffee into Germany for black market deals after a visit to her home in Copenhagen

Less Trading With United States
Fears Of U.S. Depression

London, June 14.

Highly-placed Government sources say Britain plans to do more trading with Europe, including the Communist orbit nations, and less with the United States.

A primary reason, these informants explained, is that "Britain is running out of dollars." Another reason, they added, is that Britain wants to lessen her economic dependence on America fearing that under the present world trade set-up a depression there would mean a depression here.

They expressed a belief that American Secretary of State George C. Marshall's projected programme of aid for Europe would encourage the development of Britain's foreign trade.

They declared a sound programme of United States help for Europe implied dollars for the European countries enabling them to:

1. Buy more from Britain.
2. Build up their productive plants and produce more for sale to Britain.

Turning Eastward

Anglo-European trade on any major scale might take years to develop but Britain has already turned eastward in search for goods and markets. Already Anglo-Russian trade talks have begun.

An Anglo-Polish trade pact has been approved in principle and an Anglo-French pact has been concluded. Talks looking toward a formal agreement with Hungary will begin next month. Exploratory talks are under way with Bulgaria and Rumania.

Britain has already been trading with Czechoslovakia and the Scandinavian countries and wants to expand it. To some extent the trend may represent a "normalising" of Anglo-European trade after the wartime interruption, but Government sources described it as a "deliberate programme" intended to cushion Britain against the shock of any global dollar famine.

Political Effect

The informants said the programme will tend to make "less sharp" the political conflicts between Britain and the Communist-controlled nations. Inevitably, they said, nations with mutually beneficial trade relations tend to be drawn closer together in international diplomacy.

These sources have close connections with the British Cabinet, Treasury and Board of Trade. Their statements came against this background:

War-damaged Britain is poor and her American loan is dwindling. There has been talk in the streets of another loan. The Government has indicated it wants no second loan: strong political forces would oppose it on the ground that it would virtually "mortgage" Britain to the United States.

The Government, however, has never hinted it would not welcome American help in some other form than a loan.

Concessions

A question arises: Has the trade trend with its political implications and promise of reduced buying in the United States been over-emphasised here with the aim of wringing economic concessions from the United States?

America could give economic concessions to Britain in at least five ways:

- 1—A loan on favourable terms which Britain could be forced by sheer necessity to accept.
- 2—An outright grant of money.
- 3—The lowering of its tariffs on British goods sent for marketing in America.
- 4—A system of dollar loans or grants to all European nations which then would be in a better position to buy from Britain.
- 5—Some form of lend-lease.

Britain is campaigning at Geneva, where the question of tariffs is under consideration, for the lowering of American tariffs in particular.

Less From U.S.

Meanwhile, with her dollar loan running dry, these informants said the British Cabinet already has made tentative plans for a sharp reduction in imports from the United States. She hopes for food and timber from Russia and food from Hungary. She has arranged for coal, textiles and eggs from Poland and seeks food and possibly Bulgarian tobacco from the Balkan states. She will pay for these primarily with industrial machinery, agricultural equipment, capital equipment and consumer goods.

The "Financial Times" daily newspaper of the financial community, questioned the wisdom of an Anglo-Soviet agreement if it involved British credits to Russia.

The "Times" of London said British diplomacy "may well be along practical lines of closer ties with smaller countries as a means of approach to a better understanding with Soviet Russia."

These Government sources, however, said trade with the east was dictated for Britain by the "hard facts of economic necessity." They stated that unless the US$3,000,000,000 overbalance on the side of American imports as compared with exports could be closed by a United States policy of loans and grants in aid, the recovery of every country in the world would be held back. Associated Press.

BUSINESSMEN AND JAPAN

Washington, June 13. The United States Department of Commerce today announced that it was now accepting applications from businessmen for permits to visit Japan beginning August 15.

Permits will be allowed for 21-day periods, but extensions may be granted by the Supreme Commander, General Douglas MacArthur, under the terms of the agreement.

N.Y. Stock Market

New York, June 13. Stocks broke through the May peak on a late rally. Stock averages reached the highest since April 11.

Industrial favourites led the upturn. Selected oils, chemicals, mining and soft drinks touched new 1947 highs. Total transactions were 900,000 shares.

Of the 1,067 issues traded, 589 gained and 194 lost. The Associated Press averages reached 03.3 in climb of 2.1 for the week.

At one time American Telephone touched a new low of 157 before rebounding. Gudeby climbed 1% at 40 on an increased dividend rate and a 40 cent extra dividend.

Mining shares enjoyed a brief flurry on a rumour that Britain might lift its gold price to $40 an ounce. Homestake reached a new high for the year at 48, up 2%.

Coca-Cola jumped for the third day, up six at 175 1/2. The Dow Jones Averages:

ARTIST AND SUBJECT. Shown placing last minute touches on his oil portrait of Mary T. Lo, (right) of Hong Kong, is artist Wong Sul-ling of New York, now visiting the Colony. Born here, Mr. Wong has been in America nine years during which he has received several high awards. He is scheduled to hold an exhibit in Hong Kong soon.

An Artist Who Has Known War

One half of a well known Chinese artist team is back in Hong Kong after nine years of successful work in the United States. He is Wong Sul-ling who left for San Francisco in 1938 armed only with a partial Chinese government scholarship and self confidence.

Today Mr. Wong can boast top awards in some of America's important art exhibits and an established position as an oil painter and watercolourist.

Mr. Wong now 38, is back in Hong Kong for a few months after having been summoned by the Nanking government to exhibit his work and do some commission painting in the capital. He plans to return to New York around the first of the year.

A self-taught artist until he was 29, Mr. Wong worked for many years here as a staff artist for the Advertising and Publicity Bureau. His first exhibit was held in 1936 at the Hotel Cecil at which time his large, dramatic wall mural, "Falconers" was first unveiled. One of his first customers and admirers was the then Governor, Sir Andrew Caldecott, who purchased two pictures.

Sketched Captors

Mr. Wong's formal education in art began at the California Academy of Art in San Francisco. Later, he attended the Art Students League and Columbia University in New York. He has lately been a member of the art faculty of the latter school.

As long as man is vain, the artist will survive. This fact was vividly illustrated to Mr. Wong when he was 14 and held for eight months by bandits near Canton. His sketches of his captors won him extra privileges and better treatment than fellow prisoners, he recalls.

Mr. Wong is an artist who has known war. As a Captain in Chiang Kai-shek's forces during the siege of Shanghai he witnessed the Japanese bombing of his own school.

Wife Sculptress

Not the only artistic member of his family, Mr. Wong's wife, Linda, is a sculptress in her own right. Her marble bust, "Supplication" won top place in the same National Arts Club annual exhibit in 1945 in which Mr. Wong took second place for his painting, "And the Storm Passed."

A series of breathtaking watercolours, (his favourite medium) were produced as the result of a continent-wide tour of the United States several years ago. Street scenes in New York, New Orleans, San Francisco, Los Angeles and other American cities vividly depict phases of American life as seen through the eyes of a Chinese artist. These, and many of his oils, are soon to be shown at an exhibit in Hong Kong.

Changes Likely In England's Team

London, June 13.
With changes likely to be made in England's team, which is being chosen on Sunday, to meet South Africa in the second Test beginning at Lords on June 21, several players with chances of inclusion staked their claims with good performances in matches just finished.

The most pleasing of all was the welcome return to form of the Kent spinner, Douglas Wright, who was relegated to "drunk carrier" for the first Test. Operating on a batsman's wicket against Northamptonshire he turned the ball well and finished with eleven wickets for 157.

He and Leslie Ames, former England wicket-keeper, were big factors in Kent's nine wickets victory. Ames' first innings century, with five not out in the second innings, brought his aggregate to 943 runs for an average of 134.5, which includes three centuries and a double century.

The young Middlesex opening bats, Jack Robertson, who made Middlesex history by helping Brown in a record opening partnership for the county of 319, has been on the fringe of Test honours since last season. His brilliant 183 may sway the selectors to take the course suggested by many critics to include him lower down to strengthen the England batting.

Like For Test?

John Ikin, Lancashire all-rounder, who toured Australia with the English team but was not retained for the Test against South Africa at Trent Bridge, is again being spoken of as a Test possibility. He made an effort to catch the eye of the selectors again with a grand 72 against Glamorgan. He was heading confidently for his first County championship century and was unfortunate to be out before he had reached his highest score in first-class matches was 116 against Lancashire in 1938.

Derbyshire's lightning victory over Somerset—the first one-day victory in the county championship since 1925—provided another cricket coincidence. Somerset were the victim on the previous occasion when Lancashire won.

"Bluebird" Not Ready For Record Bid

Lake Coniston, June 13.
Sir Malcolm Campbell announced late today that he would send his jet-propelled boat, Bluebird III, back to Portchester for modifications, thus ending his present attempts to smash his own world's record.

The announcement followed two trials last night and today, in which the craft shook slightly before reaching the speed of 100 miles per hour.

Sir Malcolm told a press conference he planned to return to Coniston in a month for another record attempt. He said that at present the boat's lateral stability was wrong.

"It is a question of aerodynamics and hydrodynamics," he said. "I can assure you I am more determined than I ever was before."

Modifications will be done at Foster's yard in Portchester, where the craft was originally designed.

Sir Malcolm disclosed that the highest speed reached in the two tests was between 100 and 110 miles per hour.

"Our tests have not been entirely abortive," he said. "We have certainly learned something. In certain points, Bluebird exceeded by far our highest expectations."

Sir Malcolm's 24-year-old daughter, Jean, expressed pleasure that her father would take no more risks at present.

Exhibition Fights

Spokane, June 14.
Joe Louis, world's heavyweight boxing champion, plans to make an exhibition tour of Europe and Australia next year before he returns from the ring.

This was announced by Fred Sommers, the champion's representative on the current exhibition tour of the western states. No plans have been settled but Louis is likely to visit Australia before Europe.

Joe Louis will return to New York on July 15 to discuss plans for defending the world title in September. —Reuter.

Mannion Wants To Leave

London, June 13.

Surprise was caused in Middlesbrough football circles when it became known that Wilfred Mannion, Middlesbrough's international inside forward, desired to leave his club.

Mannion has not yet asked the club to put him on the transfer list, but he said that he was not happy at Middlesbrough and desired a change of club because he thought it would do him good.

"I have no personal grievance against Middlesbrough, but I believe a move would be to my advantage," said Mannion.

David Jack, manager of the club, stated that at present Middlesbrough have no statement to make. It is nearly three weeks since Middlesbrough issued their retained list. This includes Mannion's name and he has been offered maximum terms. It is extremely unlikely that Middlesbrough will agree to put Mannion on the transfer list, but in the event of such an unlikely happening, it is certain they would want a record fee, for Mannion is regarded as the cleverest inside forward in soccer today. —Reuter.

Swimming Meet

All the events in the swimming meet between Lai Tsun and the Victoria Recreation Club were closely contested at the Chinese Y.M.C.A. last night. Lai Tsun won by 22 points to 22.

Victoria Recreation Club won both relay races but Lai Tsun gained a number of points through their early swimmers.

Monteiro did well to secure second place in the 220 yards free style, finishing strong in the last length and nearly overtaking the winner.

The 160 Yards free style relay was exciting. Bayot, the first man for V.R.C., held his own, but J. Rosa Pereira gave the club a slight lead which Gomes held in spite of a strong challenge by Chan Chung-man. Ballerand was not pushed and won by seven yards.

Both clubs had several of their best swimmers absent and the return meet at the V.R.C. is looked forward to with great interest.

Cotton, Von Nida Tie

Leeds, June 13.
Henry Cotton and Norman Von Nida, of Australia, each with an aggregate of 277 for 72 holes, tied for first place in the "Yorkshire Evening News" 1,000 guineas professional golf tournament at Moortown, Leeds, today.

Cotton had rounds of 66, 72, 70 and 69, while Von Nida had 67, 67, 70 and 73.

The Australian had a lead of four strokes when the final two rounds began today, and with each returning a card of 70 for the third round, he was still four strokes ahead of Cotton.

Cotton's brilliant last round of 69 set Von Nida the task of returning 72 to win the first prize, but he failed with an eight-yard putt by inches and tied.

W. Shankland, of Temple Neesam, with rounds of 73, 70, 69 and 71 was next, six strokes behind Cotton and Von Nida, while Arthur Lees, of Dore and Totley, filled fourth place with rounds of 69, 71, 70 and 74 for an aggregate of 284. —Reuter.

Nortons Win The Senior TT

Douglas, June 13.
An immense crowd, who watched the Isle of Man Tourist Trophy motor cycling races over the famous course, saw a thrilling struggle in both the senior and lightweight events, which were run concurrently over seven laps of the course, a distance of 264.133 miles.

The senior event was won by Harry Daniell, of London, riding a Norton, who covered the course in three hours 11 minutes 22.15 seconds at an average speed of 82.813 miles per hour.

Daniell, winner of this event in 1938, only beat Artie Bell, of Belfast, also riding a Norton, by 22 seconds, while P. Goodman, of Birmingham, was third.

Bell's average speed was 82.656 miles per hour and Goodman's 82.463 miles per hour.

The Dublin rider, M. Harrington, riding an Italian Moto Guzzi, won the lightweight event in three hours 36 minutes 26.35 seconds at an average speed of 73.220 mph. Just over ten seconds behind came Maurice Cann, also on a Moto Guzzi, in three hours 37 minutes 10.45 seconds, an average speed of 72.972 mph, while Bob Drinkwater, on an Excelsior, was third, with an average speed of 70.139 mph.

There were 27 riders in the senior event and 20 in the lightweight. —Reuter.

Only Three Ocean Liners

Tokyo, June 14.
Shipping experts today said that Japan at present had only three ships capable of crossing the Pacific, where she must depend almost entirely upon foreign bottoms for the transport of imports and exports when private international trade was resumed on August 15.

One of these ships is the Hikawa Maru, which plied the Seattle-Yokohama run and during the war was a hospital ship. Experts said Japan had 1,000,000 tons of shipping, which was only one-fourth of the 1934 level. However, 30 per cent was at present in docks undergoing repairs. —United Press.

Electric Tote For Hong Kong

An all-electrical totalisator, valued at five figures in pounds sterling, is to be purchased from England by the Hong Kong Jockey Club.

An official said yesterday that the order will be placed as soon as one or two technical points on the specification are satisfactorily adjusted.

Between the time the order is placed and the machinery arrives in Hong Kong there will be a lapse of a year and another four to five months will be needed for the installation.

Said the official: "The Club intended to have a totalisator as long ago as 1932, but just before the war when it was in a position to do so, international conditions prevented it."

The new totalisator, when it is installed, will relieve a large amount of congestion in the betting halls of the race meets. Backers will be able to place their money on any pony in the field at any window instead of having to queue outside a particular partition. Tickets will be issued by the automatic machines.

Another Revolt In Sinkiang Looms

local warlords and has now developed into a struggle for power between the pro-Soviet and pro-Chinese factions.

A high official, holding the rank of Vice-Minister, told United Press that though there is little or no evidence to prove direct Soviet implication it is beyond question that Russia is the master-mind directing the plots in Sinkiang.

He claimed the situation in China at present is similar to that in Eastern Europe where Soviet expansionist policy is also working through indirect channels.

While the United States is acting and supporting the fight against Communism in Europe, there is a growing feeling in China's officialdom over the alleged failure of United States policy makers to understand the China situation, he said.

"The moment has come for a decision and the American people must decide whether China is to go to the dogs or whether they are to aid Nanking's crusade against communism," this official said.

He added that the Chinese Government is eagerly awaiting a United States re-statement of policy, saying that the "Red Menace" is a reality which, coupled with the chaotic economic conditions, might force the eventual collapse of the National Government which, though falling to live up to the hopes of many, still represented the existence of China as an independent nation.

General Pai Chung-hai, Minister of National Defence, told a press conference today that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has personally ordered Chinese troops in Sinkiang to defend China's border.

While no additional reports reached Nanking this morning the latest dispatches indicated continued fighting in the Peltan area.

Reliable sources told United Press that the Chinese Government has ordered the Sinkiang military authorities to produce some concrete evidence showing that war planes bearing Soviet markings covered the Mongolian attacks. Such evidence would considerably strengthen China's case in negotiations with Moscow. —United Press.

No Comment
Nanking, June 14.
No comment was offered at the Foreign Ministry today on the denial by Tass, Soviet News Agency, that Russian planes aided the Outer Mongolians in their attacks on Chinese positions in Sinkiang.

A broadcast heard here quoted Tass as stating that it was authorized to announce that China's claims were not in accordance with facts and represented "provocative fabrication."

Officials contacted at the Foreign Office declined to express any opinion. Foreign Ministry sources, however, did reveal that no reply has been received to the protests lodged with Russia and Outer Mongolia. They would not comment on what action China would take if the notes were not answered. —Reuter.

Japanese Not Keen On Christianity

Singapore, June 14.
Japanese surrendered personnel in Singapore are not showing any keenness to embrace Christianity despite the efforts of an English woman missionary, who spent 35 years in Japan preaching the gospel, and who is now visiting the 15 Japanese camps scattered over Singapore island.

Out of a total of 21,000 Japanese surrendered personnel in Singapore, only 42 are Christians, including 11 recently baptised by the Bishop of Singapore, Dr. J. L. Wilson, who, during the occupation, suffered cruel maltreatment at the hands of the Japanese.

This missionary work among the Japanese is being undertaken by Miss A. M. Henty, an honorary missionary attached to the Church Missions Society, England, who arrived here in February this year at the invitation of Bishop Wilson.

She makes a strenuous round of the Japanese camps, which are situated in the more outlandish parts of the island, preaching to her audience. The Australian Bible Society recently sent to Singapore 3,000 copies of the New Testament, while another 4,000 bibles and religious tracts have come from the London Society.

Miss Henty, undaunted by the lack of response to her efforts, steadily continues with her work and plans to return to Japan with the last batch of Japanese repatriated from Singapore, probably at the end of the year.

It is Miss Henty's opinion that many Japanese are longing to become Christians, although Christianity has been frowned upon by the Japanese military. "The Japs are materialists, but aren't we all? They need the word of 'God' the same as we do."

She said that when she first started preaching many Japanese came to hear "just out of sheer curiosity," and although the numbers have dwindled down now, "there is greater earnestness," —Reuter.
